

Goodwin & Oviatt Lines

Thirteen generations behind Bobby Goodwin: Utah pioneers who left Nauvoo with handcarts and ox teams, Kentucky and Missouri farmers who eloped across the river to Kansas, Quakers disowned for love, Portuguese islanders who came to Red Bluff, a South Dakota sergeant's daughter, a fighter pilot who walked home through occupied Italy, and, eleven generations back, a passenger on the Mayflower.

Traced from the family's own records for Robert Anthony Goodwin, born 1983, by his wife Grace Marie Goodwin, née Sainz, and for their daughter Elizabeth Lenora Goodwin, born 2017, who carries every one of these names forward.

TWO RIVERS

Where the lines come from

Bobby's mother's people and his father's people were two thousand miles apart in 1850 and did not meet until the 1970s on the San Francisco Peninsula. Each side has a character of its own.

FATHER'S SIDE • OVIATT

Nauvoo, Farmington, Parker

Every great-great-grandparent on this side was a Latter-day Saint pioneer who crossed the plains between 1848 and 1856 and settled in Farmington, Utah, north of Salt Lake City: the Oviatts, Workmans, Millers, Biglers, Leonards and Meadowses. Behind them stand New England Puritans and Rhode Island Baptists of the 1630s, Dutch Brooklyn ferrymen, a Walloon founder of Staten Island, Swiss-Alsatian Biglers, four soldiers of the Revolution, and, through the Leonards, James Chilton of the Mayflower. In 1907 two Farmington children, Walter Oviatt and Amy Miller, married in Idaho; their son Raymond was Bobby's grandfather.

MOTHER'S SIDE • GOODWIN AND FOLEY

Kentucky, Missouri, the Azores, Red Bluff

Three streams meet in Red Bluff, Tehama County, around 1900 and 1920: the Foleys, Kentucky Baptists turned Missouri farmers who came west in 1897; the DeRose and Rodrigues families from the Portuguese islands of Pico and Madeira, who came in the 1870s; and the Goodwins, Quaker-descended wanderers who left Iowa and Kansas by covered wagon and arrived about 1917 by way of Nebraska and Washington. Their grandson Robert Charles Goodwin, born in 1925, was Bobby's grandfather, and Bobby carries the Goodwin name. A fourth stream joins here from the Dakota prairie: Robert's wife Peggy Lou Miller, born in Pierre, South Dakota, in 1926, the daughter of a World War I artillery sergeant and a Fort Pierre settler family.

THE NAMES

What Bobby and his daughter carry

Bobby is Robert, like his grandfather Robert Charles Goodwin, who was Charles after his own father Charles Herbert. His daughter is Elizabeth Lenora: Elizabeth for Bobby's mother, and before her Elizabeth Boatright of Virginia and Elizabeth Hancock of Kentucky; Lenora for Lenora 'Nora' Foley, the Red Bluff girl who married at seventeen and lived to 93, her great-great-grandmother. And whether or not anyone intended it, Anthony echoes the name that runs through Nora's Portuguese family: her grandfather Antone DeRose, her uncle Antone Allen Foley and her brother Antone 'Tony' Foley, all of them António in the old country.

EIGHTEEN STORIES

Things worth telling at the table

The best of what the records hold, in roughly the order a life would meet them: the pilot, the pioneers, the elopement, the islands, the sod houses.

PROVINCETOWN HARBOR, 8 DECEMBER 1620

A Mayflower passenger, eleven generations back

James Chilton was a tailor of St. Paul's parish, Canterbury, born about 1556, who moved his large family to Sandwich and then, as religious Separatists, to Leiden in Holland. In 1619 he and a daughter were stoned in a Leiden street by boys who took them for Arminians. The next year, at about 64, the oldest person aboard, he sailed on the Mayflower with his wife and their youngest daughter Mary. He signed the Mayflower Compact on 11 November 1620 and died aboard ship in Provincetown Harbor on 8 December, before the Pilgrims had settled at Plymouth. His wife died in the first winter. Only Mary survived, and tradition makes her the first woman to step onto Plymouth Rock.

Bobby descends from an older daughter who never made the voyage. Isabel Chilton had married Roger Chandler in Leiden in July 1615, and the Chandlers came to Plymouth Colony later: Roger is taxed there in 1633 and the family took up land at Duxbury. Their daughter Sarah, born in Leiden in 1616, married about 1640 a young Welshman named Solomon Leonard, who had also come by way of Leiden and became one of the original proprietors of Bridgewater. From there the line is written down in a book: Manning Leonard's 'Memorial of Solomon Leonard, 1637, of Duxbury and Bridgewater,' printed in 1896, follows the family generation by generation and ends with Bobby's own great-great-grandmother: Truman Leonard's daughter 'Annie Maria, b. Feb. 5, 1863, m. Sept. 11, 1884 Henry W. Miller (son of Daniel and Hannah Miller).'

The generations between are a New England story in themselves. Solomon's son Samuel Leonard moved from Bridgewater to Preston, Connecticut, in the 1690s, where his neighbours included the son and grandson of Myles Standish, and was a founding member of Preston's first church in 1698; the family history says his only son, Samuel, was carried off by Indians in 1695 as a boy and lived to carry the line on. That Samuel's son Captain Nathan Leonard marched to Crown Point in the French and Indian War, sat for Preston in the Connecticut legislature in 1759, and then moved to the new town of Worthington, Massachusetts, where he was moderator of its first town meeting in 1768 and chairman of its first selectmen. His son Captain Ezra Leonard served in the Revolution; Ezra's son Truman went to western New York, where Truman Leonard Jr. was born in 1820, joined the Latter-day Saints and walked to Utah. The chain from the Mayflower to Bobby therefore runs: James Chilton, Isabel Chilton and Roger Chandler, Sarah Chandler and Solomon Leonard, Samuel Leonard, Samuel Leonard Jr., Capt. Nathan Leonard, Capt. Ezra Leonard, Truman Leonard Sr., Truman Leonard Jr., Annie Marie Leonard, Amy Irene Miller, Raymond Oviatt, Walter Oviatt, Bobby. Fourteen steps; James Chilton is Bobby's eleventh great-grandfather.

The Mayflower Compact, 1620: the text in Governor William Bradford's own hand from his History of Plymouth Plantation, beside the list of 41 signers as first printed in 1669. The original signed sheet is lost. James Chilton is the tenth name in the first column, between Francis Eaton and John Craxton.

How sure is this? Surer than anything else on the page from before 1700. The General Society of Mayflower Descendants publishes the descent from James Chilton through Isabel and Roger Chandler to Sarah Chandler and Solomon Leonard in its own 'Mayflower Families Through Five Generations' series, and every generation from Solomon Leonard down to Annie Leonard Miller is printed in the 1896 book, whose author corresponded with the Farmington family directly. This is a line the Society accepts for membership, which means Bobby, and Elizabeth Lenora after him, could join it with these two books and a stack of birth certificates. The FamilySearch tree also runs two more Mayflower lines (Stephen Hopkins, and John Howland with Elizabeth Tilley) to Bobby through Hannah Bigler's Harvey ancestors, but both pass through one 1730s Maryland link that looks like a tree error, so they are listed below as doubtful.

ITALY, 8 MAY 1944

Eighteen days behind the lines

Second Lieutenant Raymond Oviatt was 26, a farm boy from Parker, Idaho, with a degree from the Southern Branch in Pocatello and a job history at a Salt Lake drive-in. He had been overseas seven weeks, flying P-40 Warhawks with the 315th Fighter Squadron of the 324th Fighter Group from the airfield at Cercola, in the shadow of Vesuvius, when on 8 May 1944 his plane, serial 42-10917, did not come back. The squadron's Missing Air Crew Report, number 4728, survives in the National Archives and is reproduced below. The mission was dive-bombing: the squadron took off from Cercola and flew north-west on a course of 312 to 340 degrees to cut two stretches of highway behind the German lines south of Rome, in hazy weather under an overcast at 11,000 feet. Lieutenant Oviatt was the only man aboard his P-40L, and the report checks the box for battle casualty and gives the cause as 'unknown: black and white smoke emerged from engine before it cut out, possible flak hit.' The time was 0755; the place, map reference G-115363.

First Lieutenant Paul M. Bull, who saw it, wrote his statement the same day: 'I first saw Lt. Oviatt just East of Lake Albano and watched him because he was out of formation and lagging. As I watched him black smoke began to belch from his ship and finally turned white. I turned back to give him cover and called him, but never received any answer. He headed for the beachhead losing altitude fast. As he got lower and the smoke became worse he rolled the plane over on its back and bailed out just South-East of Cori. I watched him till his chute opened and then returned to the flight.' The sketch map attached to the report marks Velletri, Cori, Cisterna, the Road to Rome and, to the south, Nettuno on the Anzio beachhead. He had come down in the no-man's-land between the German Fourteenth Army and the Allied troops bottled up at Anzio since January. On 25 May the Salt Lake Telegram printed his photograph under the headline 'Flier Missing.'

What happened in the eighteen days is told only in outline. The report ends with the parachute; the Army's escape-and-evasion interview, if he gave one, has not been found. But the calendar explains a good deal. Raymond jumped on 8 May. On 23 May the Allied armies broke out of the Anzio beachhead; Cisterna fell on the 25th and American troops took Cori on 26 May, eighteen days after he landed south-east of it. He almost certainly hid in that country until the front rolled over him, and he was back with his unit by the end of the month. His parents learned he was safe on Saturday, 10 June; the following Thursday morning he walked through the door

WITNESS STATEMENT

I first saw Lt. Oviatt just East of Lake Albano and watched him because he was out of formation and lagging. As I watched him black smoke began to belch from his ship and finally turned white. I turned back to give him cover and called him, but never received any answer. He headed for the beachhead losing altitude fast. As he got lower and the smoke became worse he rolled the plane over on its back and bailed out just South-East of Cori. I watched him till his chute opened and then returned to the flight. I am pretty sure he landed at G-115363 about 0755.

at 1095 South Ninth East on a 21-day leave, having told nobody he was coming. The Deseret News photographed him with his sister, Mrs. Fred C. Huth, and quoted everything he would say about it: 'I was forced to bail out over enemy territory. I remained there for 18 days.' A year later the Tribune noted that First Lieutenant Raymond M. Oviatt was a test pilot at Fort Sumner, New Mexico.

NAUVOO TO THE VALLEY, 1839-1856

Five pioneer families who met in one town

Every one of Bobby's father's great-great-grandparents was a Latter-day Saint pioneer, and all of them ended up in the same small town. Ira and Ruth Oviatt joined the church about 1839 in New York, lived at Kirtland and Nauvoo, buried two little boys in Nauvoo, and crossed the plains in 1851. Jacob Workman brought his family from Tennessee to Nauvoo in 1842, lost his wife Nancy Reader at Mount Pisgah during the 1846 exodus, and reached the valley in 1848 with three-year-old Josephine. Daniel Miller, a Quincy mill owner ordained by Joseph Smith, and Hannah Bigler, whose brother's diary would date the gold discovery at Sutter's Mill, drove their oxen and one horse team into the valley on 4 September 1848 and were among the five families who founded Farmington that autumn. Truman Leonard came in 1850, went to India as a missionary, and walked back in 1856 beside the handcarts. Mary Ann Meadows pulled one of those handcarts.

Within a generation the families were intermarried: Dee Oviatt (born in Nauvoo in 1843) married Josephine Workman (born in Nauvoo in 1845); Henry Miller married Annie Leonard; and their children Walter Oviatt and Amy Miller, both born in Farmington in 1885, married at Parker, Idaho, on New Year's Day 1907. Their son was Raymond, the pilot.

FARMINGTON, 31 OCTOBER 1886

The baby in the blacksmith shop

Two months after his wife Josephine died, Dee Oviatt sat down in Farmington to answer a letter from his sister. He wrote about the wheat he had raised, 287 bushels, and the peaches rotting on the ground for want of gathering, and about the shop: 'I have lots of work in the shop that takes my mind off my trouble. I think if I could not work, I would go crazy. We were just getting so we could live comfortable. We had got two of our rooms papered and fixed up so that we could enjoy ourselves when we had company and now I can't bear to think the Lord's will be done.'

Then he wrote about his youngest: 'We call our baby Walter Lewis. The older one is John Fred. We lost a girl between them, Caroline Esteela. She was as pretty as a picture and smart as could be... The baby is in the shop with me most of the time. He can tell how the cow and sheep, pigs, dogs and horse and rooster goes. He can mock them nicely. He can call all of us by our names. He is getting as fat as a little pig. He has slept with me on the floor ever since his mother was taken sick. He is the best little fellow in the country.' Dee died ten weeks later, on 2 January 1887. Walter Lewis Oviatt, the baby who mocked the rooster, was Bobby's great-great-grandfather; he grew up with his brother Jack and sister Josephine, farmed in Idaho, and lived to see his own son come home from the war.

COLOMA, 24 JANUARY 1848

The diary that dated the Gold Rush

Hannah Bigler's older brother Henry, born like her at Shinnston in the hills of western Virginia, marched to California with the Mormon Battalion in 1846 and, when the battalion was discharged, took work building a sawmill for John Sutter on the American River. He kept a diary. On the night of 24 January 1848 he wrote: 'this day some kind of mettle was found in the tail race that looks like goald first discovered by martial, the boss of the mill.' James Marshall himself kept no record, and when the date of the discovery was later disputed, it was Henry Bigler's diary, corroborated by a fellow battalion veteran, that settled it. The diary is at the Huntington Library today.

Hannah, meanwhile, was at Winter Quarters with her husband Daniel Miller and two babies. That spring she drove the family's one-horse team across the plains, arrived in the Salt Lake Valley in September 1848, and helped found Farmington. She had ten children and outlived Daniel by 24 years. Her first cousin Bathsheba Bigler Smith became general president of the Relief Society.

LIVERPOOL TO SALT LAKE, 1856

The handcart bride

Mary Ann Meadows was 21, the eleventh child of a Worcestershire farm family, when she sailed from Liverpool on the Enoch Train on Good Friday 1856 with several hundred Latter-day Saint converts. One of her brothers, a soldier, had told her that if he knew she would go to Utah and join the Mormons he would blow off her head. She went. From Boston the emigrants took the railroad to Iowa City, built handcarts, and walked 1,300 miles. Hers was the Ellsworth company, the first handcart company ever to cross, and it came down Emigration Canyon on the forenoon of Friday, 26 September 1856, to be met by William Pitt's brass band, most of the city, and Brigham Young, who escorted them to the public square for a melon feast.

She found work in Brigham Young's kitchen. There a farmer named Truman Leonard, just back from four years as a missionary in India, asked Young's permission to marry two English emigrant girls; his first wife had approved. He proposed to Margaret Bourne and Mary Ann on 5 January 1857 and married them both in the Endowment House the next day, Mary Ann's 22nd birthday. Margaret insisted on being married first. Mary Ann, as her posterity put it, 'received a compensating blessing': seven children, all of whom lived to grow up, raised on the left side of a rock double house with a stairway up the middle. Her daughter Annie married Henry Miller.

GREAT SALT LAKE, 1870S

Sheep on Fremont Island

Daniel Miller and his brother Henry, having built most of Farmington, decided that Fremont Island in the Great Salt Lake, treeless and uninhabited, would make an excellent sheep range. Their sons, including Bobby's ancestor Henry William Miller, designed and built a two-masted, double-decked sailboat fifty feet long, the Lady of the Lake, launched sideways down greased planks at the mouth of Farmington Creek, capable of carrying 300 sheep a trip. They ran up to 2,000 sheep on the island, which had brackish springs, sagebrush 'as big around as a man's waist and taller than a man on horseback,' and 'a snake in every bush.' With no herder, the sheep 'became as wild as deer.'

The family communicated with the island by signal fires on the Farmington foothills; three fires meant distress. They sailed at night by the stars, were once becalmed for eight days with a load of sheep, and once nearly capsized when a foresail snapped 'with a smack as loud as a cannon shot.' On the summit they found a rock monument left by the explorer John C. Frémont and, beside it, the brass cap of his spyglass. A federal judge named Wenner eventually bought the island out from under them, and the Millers took their sheep off with the Lady of the Lake and a cattle barge. She was later blown ashore west of Farmington and wrecked on Promontory Point.

TENNESSEE AND UTAH, 1812–1878

A poor man but an honest one

Jacob Lindsay Workman wrote his family's story in an old day book in 1855, and it is the oldest first-person account in this tree. His grandfather Jacob was 'the great hunter of the savage mountains of Maryland and Pennsylvania as was Daniel Boone of Kentucky.' His father John, a Dunkard who fell out with his church, made whiskey and brandy on 3,000 acres in Tennessee, and the sight of 'people of low standing' spending their last cent on it 'put a disgust in it' that made young Jacob a teetotaler at eighteen. While other young men drank and fought and paid the county fines, he cut timber, and 'by the time I was 21 I had one as good a house as there was in the neighborhood.'

The family joined the Latter-day Saints in 1839 and 1840 and followed them to Nauvoo, to Mount Pisgah (where Jacob's wife Nancy and son Samuel died in 1846), to the Salt Lake Valley in 1848, to a mission among the Indians at Las Vegas in 1856, and to the cotton country of southern Utah in 1862, 'where we all suffered very much for food and clothing.' In 1875 he lost an eye and asked his son to lance it with a pocketknife. He died in July 1878 near Virgin City,

Mount Pisgah, Iowa, where Jacob Workman's first wife and son died in 1846.

ASSAM TO KUNMING, 1944-1945

The pump station operator on the Ledo Road

For most of this project the family knew only that Robert Goodwin had been in the Army and come home in January 1946. The copy of his discharge that he had recorded at the San Mateo County courthouse in June 1946, which FamilySearch has filmed, fills in the war. He was inducted at San Francisco on 9 April 1943, three months past his eighteenth birthday, and went on active duty a week later; his selective service board was number 104 in San Mateo. On 11 January 1944 he sailed for the Asiatic-Pacific Theater and landed on 8 February, most likely at Bombay or Calcutta after a month at sea, and he did not see the United States again until New Year's Day 1946.

His unit was the 775th Engineer Petroleum Distribution Company, and his military occupational specialty was pump station operator. The petroleum distribution companies of the China-Burma-India theater built and ran the longest military pipeline of the war: four- and six-inch pipe laid beside the Ledo Road from the Assam oilfields across the mountains and jungle of northern Burma, joined in 1945 to the Burma Road and pushed on to Kunming in China, with pumping stations spaced along its length to keep the aviation gasoline and truck fuel moving. Robert's three campaign credits, India-Burma, Central Burma and China Defensive, trace exactly that road. He came home a Technician Fifth Grade, a corporal's pay for a specialist's job, with the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal, the Good Conduct Medal and the World War II Victory Medal, no wounds, a marksman's badge for the rifle, and a longevity total of two years, nine months and seven days. The clerk at Camp Beale recorded him at five feet five inches and 150 pounds, blue eyes, blond hair, a high-school student before the war; his signature is on the form, and a print of his right thumb was on the original. Where exactly the 775th's pump stations stood is the next thing to find; the company's records are in the National Archives.

The family under arms

Two hundred years of American wars run through this tree, and the pattern is worth seeing whole. It begins before the Republic: Nathan Leonard of Preston, Connecticut, marched to Crown Point in the French and Indian War and came home a captain of the town's trainband. In the Revolution, four of Bobby's ancestors on his father's side carried arms for the colonies, Captain Ezra Leonard, Lemuel Allis, Henry Miller of the Connecticut militia and Captain Lemuel Dow, and a fifth on his mother's side, James Boatright of Cumberland County, Virginia, supplied the cause, which is why his descendants qualify for the Daughters and Sons of the American Revolution. In 1857 Truman Leonard drummed his way to Echo Canyon with the Utah militia when the United States Army marched on the Latter-day Saints, and came home with frostbitten feet; that same winter Daniel Miller's son James Thaddeus, a 20-year-old missionary, was killed by Bannock and Shoshone raiders at Fort Limhi on the Salmon River, one of two Latter-day Saints who died in the attack that ended the mission.

The Civil War divides the family neatly by geography. Bobby's father's people were all in Utah Territory, which sent almost no one to either army; Daniel Miller, Ira Oviatt and Jacob Workman were in their fifties and sixties and their sons stayed on the farms. Bobby's mother's people were in the border country where the war was ugliest. Alexander Allen Foley, whose father had owned enslaved people on the Kentucky farm and had moved to slaveholding Platte County, Missouri, chose the Union: he served as a private in Company D of the 82nd Regiment, Enrolled Missouri Militia, the Platte County home guard under Colonel James H. Moss, raised at Weston under Captain Washington T. Woods to hold the county against Confederate guerrillas. His granite marker still reads 'Mo. Militia, 82 Reg. Co. D.' Far to the east, Flora Goodwin's father Henry Clark, a Vermont-born farmer living in northern New York in 1860, served in the Union Army; the Texas paper that reported his death in 1905 called him 'the old federal soldier.' His regiment has not been found; he is not on the rolls of the Brownville, New York, men who went, so he may have enlisted from Vermont. No Confederate service has turned up on any line. The Goodwins were Quakers and did not fight; Miles Goodwin died at home in Iowa in March 1865, in the war's last weeks, at 35.

In the First World War, Charles Herbert Goodwin served in the Army and was mustered out at Red Bluff in October 1919, and

Alexander A. Foley's marker in Jasper County, Missouri: 'Mo. Militia, 82 Reg. Co. D.'

Arthur Alexander Miller of Pierre, who had enlisted in 1915, went to France as First Sergeant of Battery C, 147th Field Artillery, South Dakota's own regiment, and came home in 1919 a disabled veteran. In the Second, Raymond Miller Oviatt, drafted in 1941 as a private whose civilian trade was cooking, flew P-40 Warhawks over Italy, was shot down on 8 May 1944 and walked back through enemy country in eighteen days, and Robert Charles Goodwin registered on his eighteenth birthday in 1943, was inducted at San Francisco that April as Private 39130554, sailed for India in January 1944 and spent nearly two years in the China-Burma-India theater as a pump station operator on the Ledo Road pipeline with the 775th Engineer Petroleum Distribution Company, coming home a Technician Fifth Grade with three campaign stars to his discharge at Camp Beale in January 1946. The last soldier in the tree is a woman: Florence Jeffries Miller, Bobby's great-grandmother, who enlisted in the Women's Army Corps at Omaha on 10 July 1943, at 39, was serving in occupied Japan when her father died in 1954, and, if the Veterans Administration's file is hers, stayed in uniform until 1964. From a Connecticut trainband to a WAC barracks in Japan, the family shows up in uniform in every American war but one, and in that one, the Civil War, it shows up on the Union side alone.

ATCHISON, KANSAS TERRITORY, 1 MARCH 1857

The elopement to Atchison

The county record is exact: on 21 November 1921, seventeen-year-old Lenora Augusta Foley married 24-year-old Charles Herbert Goodwin, a Kansas-born Army veteran of the World War who had come to Red Bluff with his parents. The ceremony was performed by Father Philip F. Brady of the Catholic church, witnessed by her brother Antone Foley and Lucile Spangle, 'with verified consent of Lenora's father,' since she was under age. Her father Pinkney lived to see two grandchildren before he died in August 1923.

They settled at last in Jasper County, near Carthage, and had eleven children; the seventh, born in 1872, was named Pinkney Pearl. Allen died at 47 in June 1882 of a bowel obstruction. A month later Nancy delivered twin girls who died the day they were born. Left with five children under sixteen, she earned the family's living as a carpet weaver in her home. In 1897 she followed her married children west and settled in Red Bluff with her three bachelor sons, Pinkney among them. Three years later Pinkney married the daughter of a Portuguese immigrant, and the Foleys became a Red Bluff family.

PICO AND MADEIRA TO RED BLUFF, 1870S

Two islands in the Atlantic

Antone DeRose was born Ant3nio da Rosa on Pico in 1855, in the shadow of Portugal's highest mountain, on an island whose men went to sea on American whaling ships and came home, when they came home at all, talking of California. He left about 1870, at fifteen. Mary Augusta Rodrigues was born in 1858 on Madeira, 600 miles to the southeast, and emigrated at nineteen. They met in Tehama County, where Portuguese islanders were taking up dairy and sheep land along the Sacramento River, and married on 21 March 1879. Their first child, Mary Clara, was born in Red Bluff the following winter.

Mary Clara married an Irish-Missouri boy, Pinkney Foley, in 1900, and their nine children grew up with names from both worlds: Antone, Theodore, Lenora, Victor, Phillip, Cecelia, Mary Lucille, Joaquin and Angelo. Nora, the third, was Bobby's great-grandmother, which makes Bobby roughly one-sixteenth Azorean and Madeiran, and puts the Catholic cemetery of St. Mary's in Red Bluff, where the DeRoses and Foleys lie, on the family map alongside the Farmington City Cemetery in Utah.

Mary Augusta Rodrigues, 'Mary A. DeRose', on a calling card.

KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND WASHINGTON, 1888-1917

Sod houses, a well, and a helicopter

Sam Goodwin, orphaned young, married Flora Clark near Norton, Kansas, in January 1888 and immediately loaded a covered wagon for Custer County, Nebraska, where Flora's mother had land. Their eldest son Harry, writing in 1955 at 67, remembered it: 'We built and lived in a sod house and Ed was born there. I remember when Mother was carrying Ed before he was born she was coming from stove to table, and a snake hung down from the rafters and rattled. Mother fainted and fell on the floor and Dad came running in with a scoop shovel and swiped that snake off the rafters and killed it on the clay floor.' Back in Kansas, Sam 'bought a school 80 and built a sod house again, cutting into a bank first,' with a roof of willows, sod and magnesia a foot thick that still leaked. There little Mary jumped into an open well after her brother; Sam fished her out with a rope, throwing sunlight down the shaft with a mirror, and ten feet of water came in right after.

The family went on to the mill town of Tenino, Washington, in 1900, back to Kansas, back to Washington, and finally to Red Bluff about 1917, where Sam farmed hay at Dairyville. Flora outlived him by eighteen years. In the great Christmas flood of 1955, when the Feather River broke through and drowned Yuba City, 87-year-old Flora and her son Al climbed into the attic and spent the night on the rafters above the rising water. In the morning Al punched a hole in the roof and waved down a helicopter. 'Can you beat that?' Harry wrote to his niece. 'Mother was in the army hospital for 2 days, but is now home in Marysville and OK.'

RED BLUFF, 21 NOVEMBER 1921

Nora, married at seventeen

Nora Foley's father Pinkney died in August 1923; three months earlier... no: three months after her father's death in 1923 would be too late. The county record is exact: on 21 November 1921, seventeen-year-old Lenora Augusta Foley married 24-year-old Charles Herbert Goodwin, a Kansas-born Army veteran of the World War who had come to Red Bluff with his parents. The ceremony was performed by Father Philip F. Brady of the Catholic church, witnessed by her brother Antone Foley and Lucile Spangle, 'with verified consent of Lenora's father,' since she was under age. Her father lived to see two grandchildren before he died in 1923.

The young Goodwins had Dolores in 1923, Robert in January 1925, Harold in Oregon in 1926 and Patricia in Humboldt County in 1928, moving north with the lumber work. The marriage did not survive the Depression; in 1933 Nora married Joseph Rocha at Gold Beach on the Oregon coast, and Joe raised Robert and Patricia. The family lived in San Francisco and then Burlingame, where Nora spent the last fifty years of her long life. She died in 1998 at 93, four years after her first great-great-grandchild's generation had begun to arrive.

CARSON CITY, NEVADA, 28 FEBRUARY 1950

A wedding in Nevada, ten days after the baby

Grace's family knew that Elizabeth's mother had not stayed in her life, and the records explain a little of how the marriage began. Peggy Lou Miller was with Robert Goodwin by 1949; her husband Rodney Fergon had published the customary notice in the San Mateo Times that January that he would not be responsible for her debts after 12 January 1949. Their daughter Susan was born in Santa Cruz County on 18 February 1950. Ten days later, on 28 February, Robert C. Goodwin and Peggy Fergon were married in Carson City, Nevada, where a couple could marry the day they arrived. Six weeks after that the 1950 census taker knocked at the Rocha house on Channing Road in Burlingame and wrote Robert down as 25, never married, a brake repairman, living with his mother, stepfather and sister; whoever answered the door did not mention a wife or a baby a month old.

The couple did set up house. Elizabeth was born at Redwood City on 29 May 1951, and the 1953 Redwood City directory has 'Goodwin Robt C (Peggy L) mech' at 221 Alameda de las Pulgas. That is the last record that shows them together. On 8 December 1959 Peggy went back to Nevada, to Las Vegas this time, and married Marvin Sumner under her maiden name; the Sumners made their home at Garden Farms, two hundred miles down the coast, and Robert was in San Mateo, where the directories list him for the next quarter-century, a mechanic at Dick Bullis's dealership in 1969, married to Laverne Codoni from 1969 to 1981. Susan and Elizabeth grew up as Goodwins on the Peninsula. Their mother's obituary in 1979 still counted them among her children, and when Marvin Sumner died in 2005 his obituary listed 'Susan Inch of Boulder Creek and Betty Smith of San Mateo' among his stepchildren.

PIERRE, SOUTH DAKOTA, TO THE CENTRAL COAST, 1926-1979

The sergeant's daughter

For most of the day this page was being made, Bobby's grandmother was a blank box. The family knew only that Elizabeth's mother had not been part of her life and had died somewhere near Santa Maria. The state birth index gave her maiden name, Miller; Grace supplied her first names, Peggy Lou, and a memory that she came from the Dakotas; and a single Find a Grave memorial in a small cemetery in the hills of San Luis Obispo County did the rest. Peggy Lou Miller was born on 13 March 1926 in Pierre, South Dakota, the daughter of a First World War artillery sergeant and a Fort Pierre homesteader's daughter. She married at nineteen, in the last summer of the Second World War, and followed her husband to San Francisco.

Her life ran through three families in seven years: two Fergon sons, Rodney and David, in 1946 and 1948, then Susan and Elizabeth with Robert Goodwin in 1950 and 1951, then, after a Las Vegas wedding in December 1959, marriage to Marvin Sumner and three more sons, Michael, Patrick and Matthew. From about 1958 she lived at Garden Farms, near Atascadero, a homemaker who volunteered for the American Cancer Society and kept the minutes of the Santa Margarita Civic Association. She died at home in January 1979 at 52. Her obituary in the Telegram-Tribune is the document that closed the circle: among the survivors it names 'two daughters, Susan Inch of Boulder Creek and Betty Goodwin of San Mateo.' Betty is Elizabeth. Her headstone in the Santa Margarita cemetery reads 'Her Fast Wit Now At Rest.'

OHIO, 24 JULY 1851

Disowned for love

The Goodwins were Quakers for at least four generations. Joseph Goodwin was born in 1795 in Chowan County, North Carolina, where Goodwins had belonged to the Society of Friends since the 1690s, and Mary Hixson in the Quaker settlement of Wrightsboro, Georgia. They married 'in meeting' at Elk Creek in Preble County, Ohio, in 1822, and raised nine children there. Their son Miles, at 21, fell in love with Martha Sloat, an eighteen-year-old Pennsylvania German girl who was not a Friend. They took out a marriage license on 23 June 1851. On 24 July the Elk Monthly Meeting minuted that Miles Goodwin had been disowned 'for disunity,' the Quaker term for marrying outside the faith.

Miles died in Iowa in 1865 at 35, leaving Martha with seven children under thirteen. The Friends took her in anyway: the Pleasant Plain meeting recorded her certificate that September. She remarried an Irishman and moved to Kansas, and her son Sam, raised by strangers, became the wandering, snake-killing, sod-house-building patriarch of the Red Bluff Goodwins. His granite marker at Oak Hill sits a few rows from the veteran's stone of his son Charles.

Probably Joseph Goodwin and Mary Hixson, Quakers of Preble County, Ohio, and Jefferson County, Iowa.

The frontier preacher and the boatwright's daughter

The Foley name is Irish, from Ó Foghladha, 'descendant of the marauder,' but this Foley line had been in Virginia since the 1600s. Its most vivid figure is the Reverend Moses Foley, born in 1738, a Baptist preacher who gathered and constituted churches across the frontier of southwest Virginia, on the New River and the Holston, then in Tennessee, and finally in Kentucky, where he moved with a company of Baptists about 1808 and became second pastor of the Cumberland River church at Barbourville. The Foley book cautiously calls William Foley's descent from Moses's family 'possible'; FamilySearch's shared tree records William as the son of Moses's son James, born on the New River in 1774.

William married Elizabeth Radford Boatright in Garrard County, Kentucky, in 1828, the ceremony performed by Moses Foley Jr. Elizabeth's family were the Boatwrights of Cumberland and Powhatan counties, Virginia, boatbuilders by name, planters by trade; her grandfather James Boatright supplied the Revolutionary cause and left a will in 1814 dividing land, an island in the James River, and enslaved people among his children. Her father Benjamin died at 46 in 1816 leaving her mother pregnant with a tenth child; the widow moved the family to Kentucky, where Elizabeth married William and died at 34 in 1840. Their fifth child was Alexander Allen Foley, who eloped to Kansas.

GRANDFATHER (FATHER'S FATHER)

Raymond Miller Oviatt 1917-2007

BORN 22 June 1917, Parker, Fremont County, Idaho

DIED 24 October 2007, San Mateo, California, aged 90

Raymond grew up in the Snake River farm country of eastern Idaho, the fourth of six children of Walter and Amy Oviatt. He was blessed in the Latter-day Saint church as a six-week-old, lived in Parker and then Pocatello, and moved with his parents to Salt Lake City in 1938 after graduating from the University of Idaho's Southern Branch in Pocatello, the school that is now Idaho State University. Before the war he worked at Fred and Kelly's, a drive-in barbecue restaurant in Salt Lake.

He was drafted into the Army at Salt Lake City on 18 March 1941, a private with four years of high school whose civilian trade the clerk recorded as cook, five feet eight and 153 pounds, serial number 39676300; Utah's service card for 1942 already calls him Lieutenant. He entered the Air Corps in April 1942, trained as a fighter pilot, and went overseas on 17 March 1944. Flying a Curtiss P-40L Warhawk (serial 42-10917) with the 315th Fighter Squadron, 324th Fighter Group, Twelfth Air Force, from the field at Cercola near Naples, he failed to return from a dive-bombing mission against the roads below Rome on the morning of 8 May 1944. The Army opened Missing Air Crew Report 4728, now in the National Archives and reproduced below: his engine began trailing black and then white smoke east of Lake Albano, he lost height toward the Anzio beachhead, rolled the Warhawk on its back and bailed out south-east of Cori at 7:55 a.m., and a squadron mate watched his parachute open over German-held ground. On 25 May the Salt Lake papers reported him missing in action. Eighteen days after he jumped, the Allied breakout from Anzio took Cori, and he was back with his unit, and on 15 June 1944 he walked in on his astonished parents at 1095 South Ninth East in Salt Lake City, on a 21-day leave. Asked about it, he 'merely said, I was forced to bail out over enemy territory. I remained there for 18 days.' By June 1945 he was a First Lieutenant and a test pilot at Fort Sumner Army Air Field in New Mexico.

After the war he went to Los Angeles; the voter rolls have him at 11951 Sherman Way in 1948 and 1950. He married Marian Louise Martin, a Massachusetts girl who had grown up a ward of the City of Worcester, in Clark County, Nevada, on 28 October 1949, and on 5 May 1950 the census taker found the couple in Los Angeles (he spelled them 'Aviatt'), Raymond a mechanic in the aircraft-fuel industry, Marian 24 and born in Massachusetts. Their son Walter Lee, Bobby's father, was born there on 3 August 1951, ten weeks after Elizabeth Goodwin was born in Redwood City, and a second son, Gary Ray, followed on 23 August 1954; the California Birth Index records both to a mother née Martin, which is what settles Marian as Bobby's grandmother. From 1952 to 1962 the family voted from 17418 Califa Street in the San Fernando Valley. The marriage ended in Reno, where the Nevada index records the divorce of Raymond and Raymond Oviatt as a young man: a printed portrait, probably from a college yearbook, shared on Ancestry by a Whitfield cousin. The wartime clipping is in the stories below.

Marian Oviatt in Washoe County on 12 January 1968. He was living in San Mateo by 1971, married Valerie Rae Wristen (1933–2013) in Reno on 25 October 1975, lived in Belmont in the 1990s, and died in San Mateo on 24 October 2007 at 90.

GREAT - GRANDFATHER

Walter Lewis Oviatt 1885–1966

BORN 6 March 1885, Farmington, Davis County, Utah Territory

DIED 7 February 1966, Los Angeles; buried Wasatch Lawn Memorial Park, Millcreek, Utah

Walter was the baby in the blacksmith shop. His mother Josephine died in August 1886, when he was seventeen months old, and his father Dee, a Farmington blacksmith, wrote to his sister that October: 'We call our baby Walter Lewis... The baby is in the shop with me most of the time. He can tell how the cow and sheep, pigs, dogs and horse and rooster goes. He can mock them nicely... He has slept with me on the floor ever since his mother was taken sick. He is the best little fellow in the country.' Ten weeks after writing that letter Dee died too. Walter was not yet two, and he and his older siblings were raised by relatives.

By 1900 he was living at St. Anthony in Fremont County, Idaho, where his mother's brother James Thomas Workman had helped found the town of Parker in 1885. On New Year's Day 1907 Walter married Amy Irene Miller at Parker, another Farmington child whose family had moved north. They farmed at Parker through the 1910s, moved to Pocatello by 1930, and to Salt Lake City in 1938, where they lived on Ninth East and waited out the war news about their son Raymond. Walter registered for the 1942 draft at 57, was living in Tooele, Utah, in 1950, and died in Los Angeles in February 1966. Amy died six months later. They were buried together at Wasatch Lawn in Salt Lake County.

Dee Albert Oviatt 1843-1887

BORN 4 September 1843, Nauvoo, Hancock County, Illinois

DIED 2 January 1887, Farmington, Utah; buried Farmington City Cemetery

Dee was born in Nauvoo in the last full year of Joseph Smith's life, the seventh child of Ira and Ruth Oviatt. He was two when his family left Illinois with the Saints, spent his boyhood at Council Point on the Iowa side of the Missouri, and crossed the plains at seven in 1851. He grew up to be a blacksmith like his father; the Farmington museum records 'Dee Oviatt had a shop on the corner of State Street and 2nd East.'

On Christmas Eve 1865 he married Josephine Workman, and they had ten children. When Aurelia Spencer Rogers organized the church's first Primary for children in Farmington in 1878, D. Albert, Josephine and Nannie Oviatt were on the founding roll. His surviving letter, written after Josephine's death, is heartbroken and plain: 'I have lots of work in the shop that takes my mind off my trouble. I think if I could not work, I would go crazy.' He died on 2 January 1887 at 43, and their youngest children were raised by relatives.

Farmington, Utah
October 31, 1886
Received your kind and welcome letter and was glad to hear that you were all well.
We are all pretty well at present, and I hope this will find you all the same. Dave and Paul were here in the morning, and I received your letter in the evening. They had been up to Logan Temple. They had three children with them. They were all well and getting along better than they ever had, so they say.
David wanted me to move out there - to Ashley.
You wanted to know how I get along. Mother and the two girls do the house work for us.
We call our baby Walter Lewis. The older one is John Fred. We lost a girl between them, Caroline Estela. She was as pretty as a picture and smart as could be. Well, dear Sister, how I do wish you could come and make us a visit, and then I could tell you more than I could write in a year.
D. Albert is not married, yet.
I got a letter from Lucy the other day. They were all well. Thomas was carrying the mail out there. They raised some potatoes and corn but no wheat.
I raised two hundred and eighty seven (287) bushels of wheat myself this year.
You wanted me to come down there. You don't know how I would like to come, but I can't leave things here, now. I have lots of work in the shop that takes my mind off my trouble. I think if I could not work, I would go crazy. We were just a getting so we could live comfortable. We had got two of our rooms papered and fixed up so that we could enjoy ourselves when we had company and now I can't bare to think the Lord's will be done.
The baby is in the shop with me most of the time. He can tell how the cow and sheep, pigs, dogs and horse and rooster goes. He can mock them nicely. He can call all of us by our names. He is getting as fat as a little pig. He has slept with me on the floor every since his mother was taken sick. He is the best little fellow in the country.
How I do wish you could come and make us a visit if nothing more than a week or two. I would like it so well. There ain't much news here, now.
Mother sends her love to you and your mother and all the rest.
Tell Joseph to write to us if he can get time. Give my respect to him and his family anyhow.
We had quite a storm here, this fall, but it is fine weather here now. I think I will go out for a dirt haul when it comes another storm. We will be gone about a week. We go up to Weber.
You said peaches were only worth 1 cent. They are worth 5 here. The most of ours are rotting on the ground for the want of gathering.
The children are all "a bed and sleep", so I will have to quit for this time ... hoping to hear from you soon.
My love to your mother and all.

Josephine Workman 1845–1886

BORN 27 July 1845, Nauvoo, Illinois

DIED 23 August 1886, Farmington, Utah; buried Farmington City Cemetery

Josephine's life began in Nauvoo and was shaped by the exodus. Her father Jacob Workman wrote that 'in the spring of 1846 we left Nauvoo for the plains and came to Mt Pisgah. There we suffered much sickness and affliction. There my son Samuel died October the 11th 1846, then Nancy my wife died also November the 23rd 1846.' Josephine was sixteen months old. Her father remarried the following February, and in April 1848 the family started for the valleys of the mountains, arriving in September; Josephine was three.

She grew up in Salt Lake City, married Dee Oviatt in Farmington on 24 December 1865, and bore ten children, including Walter, the last. She died in August 1886 at 41 after an illness, and her husband followed her within five months. Her brother James Thomas Workman, who had walked the plains as a boy of thirteen, later founded Parker, Idaho, where Josephine's orphaned son Walter would make his home.

Henry William Miller 1860–1943

BORN 5 October 1860, Farmington, Utah Territory

DIED 24 May 1943, Salt Lake City

Named for his father's inseparable brother, Henry grew up on the Miller farm that covered much of what is now Farmington and the Lagoon amusement park. As a young man he took part in the family's most improbable enterprise: running sheep on Fremont Island in the Great Salt Lake, ferried out on a home-built two-masted sailboat called the Lady of the Lake. His cousin Seymour Miller's account names 'Daniel's sons Jacob, Edward, Joe, Dan, and Henry' among the crew.

He married Annie Marie Leonard in Salt Lake City on 11 September 1884, was ordained a High Priest and set apart for a mission in 1886, and around 1900 moved his family to the new farming towns of the upper Snake River in Idaho. They had eight children. Annie died at St. Anthony in 1920; Henry remarried Annette Abbott in 1921 and died in Salt Lake City in 1943.

Ira A. Oviatt 1804–1868

BORN 8 December 1804, Berlin, Rensselaer County, New York

DIED 1 July 1868, Farmington, Utah; buried Farmington City Cemetery

Ira Oviatt is the pioneer of the Oviatt line. Born in upstate New York into a family that had been in Connecticut since the 1630s, he married Ruth Fellows Bennett in 1829 and followed work west through Pennsylvania and western New York before joining the Latter-day Saints around 1839. The family lived at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1841 and then at Nauvoo, where Ira owned a lot on Block 148, was ordained an Elder in April 1844, received his temple endowment, and buried two small sons.

He left Nauvoo with the Saints in 1846, served as clerk of the Council Point branch in Iowa in 1847 and sat on the Pottawattamie High Council from 1848 to 1851, and crossed the plains with the Easton Kelsey company, which formed on 29 June 1851 and reached Salt Lake on 22 September after an aborted June start turned back by Indian trouble. He settled at Farmington, bought the town's first schoolhouse and moved it to 300 North to convert it into a blacksmith shop, took a plural wife, Nancy Maria Whitlock, in 1856, and died in 1868. He appears in Esshom's Pioneers and Prominent Men of Utah.

She buried Zera and Willis at Nauvoo and fourteen-year-old Sarah Jane at Council Point in 1848. She walked into the Salt Lake Valley in September 1851 at 42, lived another 42 years in Farmington, and died there at 84. THIRD GREAT-GRANDFATHER

Jacob Lindsay Workman 1812–1878

BORN 7 July 1812, Overton County, Tennessee

DIED 28 July 1878, near Virgin City, Kane County, Utah

Jacob left his own account, written in 1855 in an old day book and copied out by his son. His father John ran 3,000 acres, a grist mill and a whiskey distillery in Overton County, Tennessee, and Jacob, disgusted by what the liquor did to the men who bought it, swore off drink at eighteen and put the money into timber for a house: 'by the time I was 21 I had one as good a house as there was in the neighborhood.' The family joined the Latter-day Saints in 1839 and 1840; Jacob moved to Nauvoo in 1842, was made a captain of ten in Lorenzo Snow's company when the Saints left in 1846, and lost his son Samuel and his wife Nancy at Mount Pisgah that autumn.

He remarried, reached the Salt Lake Valley in September 1848, and spent the rest of his life being sent where the church needed him: to Las Vegas in 1856 'to preach to the Indians and teach them to raise corn,' leaving his family 'without grub,' then to the lead mines, then in 1862 to Utah's Dixie to raise cotton, where 'we all suffered very much for food and clothing for the first few years.' He lost an eye in 1875 (his son lanced it with a pocketknife at his request) and died in 1878 after two months of pain, exhorting his family 'to never forsake Mormonism.' His son's epitaph: 'My father was always a poor man but an honest one... when he died no man could say that J. L. Workman owed him a cent.'

THIRD GREAT-GRANDFATHER

Daniel Arnold Miller 1809–1881

BORN 11 August 1809, Lexington, Greene County, New York

DIED 4 December 1881, Providence, Cache County, Utah

Daniel and his older brother Henry left New York as teenagers for the trading post of Chicago, saved their wages, and by about 1829 had bought land at Quincy, Illinois, where they built a steam grist and sawmill on Bear Creek and married sisters, Clarissa and Elmira Pond. When the Latter-day Saints arrived in Quincy in 1839, driven out of Missouri, the Millers took them in, listened to a Mormon cooper named Abel Lamb, and were baptized that September. Joseph Smith ordained both brothers High Priests on 6 April 1840; Daniel was made bishop of the Mount Hope Stake in Adams County that October, served in the Nauvoo Legion, and helped build the temple and the Nauvoo House.

Clarissa died in September 1844, two months after the murder of Joseph Smith. On 29 December 1844 Daniel married Hannah Bigler. In 1846 the brothers helped cut the road west across Iowa, and in 1848 Daniel captained twenty wagons in the William Perkins company, arriving in the valley on 4 September 1848 with four ox teams, a one-horse team driven by Hannah, seven cows, seventeen sheep, four pigs and five chickens. His was one of the five founding families of Farmington: Daniel drove the team while his son Jacob held the plow that turned the town's first furrow. He helped locate the Parowan settlement in 1850, went back to Iowa in 1852 to bring the last company of Saints out of Kanesville (282 people, 70 wagons, arriving 9 September 1853), and with Henry built the Davis County Courthouse in 1854, the first courthouse in the Territory. The brothers' farm covered much of Farmington, including the ground that became Lagoon, and they were the first to run sheep on Fremont Island. His family paid the frontier's price too: his son James Thaddeus Miller, born at Quincy in 1837 to his first wife Clarissa, went north as a missionary to the Salmon River Mission at Fort Limhi, in what is now Idaho, and on 25 February 1858, while the men were hauling hay and timber outside the walls, some 250 Bannock and Shoshone warriors attacked the settlement, killed James and George McBride, wounded five more and drove off more than 200 cattle and 30 horses. James was 20. The two dead were buried inside the fort, the Deseret News reported the 'Indian outrage' on 17 March, and the mission was abandoned within weeks, in the same winter Truman Leonard was standing guard at Echo Canyon. Daniel died at his daughter's home in Cache Valley in 1881. His daughter's history ends: 'He was a noble man, true and faithful to the church, to his brethren and to his God.'

DIED 13 March 1905, Farmington, Utah

Hannah lost her mother at seven and was raised for a time by her Harvey grandparents. Her family joined the Latter-day Saints in West Virginia in the 1830s and gathered to Nauvoo, where she married the widowed bishop Daniel Miller in December 1844. Her older brother Henry William Bigler marched to California with the Mormon Battalion, was hired on at Sutter's sawmill, and on 24 January 1848 wrote in his diary that 'some kind of mettle was found in the tail race that looks like goald.' Because James Marshall kept no diary, Henry Bigler's entry is the record that fixes the date of the California gold discovery; the diary is now at the Huntington Library.

Hannah herself drove a one-horse team across the plains in 1848 with a toddler and a baby, then raised ten children in Farmington. She was widowed in 1881 and lived until 1905, when she was buried in the Farmington City Cemetery. Her first cousin Bathsheba Bigler Smith became the fourth general president of the Relief Society.

Truman Leonard Jr. 1820–1897

BORN 17 September 1820, Middlesex, Ontario County, New York

DIED 28 November 1897, Farmington, Utah

Truman was baptized in 1841, ordained a seventy in 1843, and married Ortentia White in the Nauvoo Temple on 1 January 1846, weeks before the Saints abandoned the city. He reached Utah in 1850 and had barely started a farm at Farmington when, in 1852, he was called on a mission to India. He preached in Calcutta and returned by way of England in 1856 with the first handcart emigration, walking beside the carts of the McArthur company. He came home 'nearly destitute after four years away' to find the bishop had divided his homestead among newcomers, leaving him twenty acres.

In January 1857 he married two young English emigrants on the same day in the Endowment House, Margaret Bourne and Mary Ann Meadows. He drummed in the Deseret Brass Band, marched with it to Echo Canyon during the Utah War, lost a mule and 116 sheep in a wind-driven fire in 1860, served as county selectman, road supervisor and water master for the creek that once bore his name, ran the Mormon Reformation in Farmington with such zeal that one family left for California, and served two more missions in the 1870s. His journals are at Brigham Young University, and his life is the subject of a Utah Historical Quarterly article, 'Truman Leonard: Pioneer Mormon Farmer' (1976).

THIRD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Mary Ann Meadows 1835–1899

BORN 6 January 1835, Strensham, Worcestershire, England

DIED 21 October 1899, Farmington, Utah

'Polly' Meadows was the eleventh child of a Worcestershire farming family. Her brothers were hostile to her new religion; one, a soldier, reportedly told her 'if I knew you would go to Utah and join the Mormons, I would blow off your head.' She sailed anyway, leaving Liverpool on the Enoch Train on Good Friday 1856, landed in Boston six weeks later, took the train to Iowa City, and walked to Utah pulling a handcart with the Ellsworth company, the very first handcart company, which came down Emigration Canyon on the forenoon of 26 September 1856 to be met by William Pitt's brass band and Brigham Young himself.

She went to work in Brigham Young's kitchen. Truman Leonard, home from India, asked Young's permission to marry two English emigrant girls; his first wife approved, and the double wedding was held in the Endowment House on 6 January 1857, Mary Ann's 22nd birthday. She raised seven children in a rock double house on the Leonard farm, every one of whom lived to adulthood, and died in 1899 in Farmington.

GRANDFATHER (MOTHER'S FATHER)

Robert Charles Goodwin 1925-2014

BORN 4 January 1925, Red Bluff, California

DIED 13 March 2014, San Mateo County, California, aged 89

Robert was born in Red Bluff country in the first week of 1925, the second of Charles and Nora Goodwin's four children, and the only known photograph of him as a baby is the Foley family portrait in which his mother holds him under a tree beside her brothers in overalls. His father's work took the family to Oregon and then to Eureka, where the 1930 census found them at 539 J Street: Nora, 25, is written down as head of the household, with Dolores, 6, Robert, 5, Harold, 3, and Patricia, 1, Charles's brother Albert Goodwin and his small son Eugene boarding with them, and Charles himself absent. His parents' marriage ended, and in 1933 his mother married Joseph Rocha, who raised Robert and his sister Patricia from the age of eight. The family moved to San Francisco by 1935, where the 1940 census lists Robert, 15, in the eighth grade at 517 Shotwell Street in the Mission District with his mother, recorded as Lanora Rocha, and Dolores, Harold and Patricia, and then to Burlingame on the Peninsula.

Robert registered for the draft on his eighteenth birthday, 4 January 1943, and his card survives in his own hand: Robert Charles Goodwin, of 14 Channing Road, Burlingame, telephone Burlingame 3-2125, born Red Bluff, employed by Joseph P. Rocha at 247 California Drive, Burlingame, and, as the person who would always know his address, 'Mr. Joseph P. Rocha (father)'. Three months later, on 9 April 1943, he was inducted into the Army at San Francisco as a private, serial number 39130554, a selectee 'single, without dependents' with three years of high school. His discharge papers, recorded at his own request with the San Mateo County Recorder on 17 June 1946, tell the rest: he went on active duty on 16 April 1943, qualified as a rifle marksman that May, sailed from the United States on 11 January 1944 and landed in the Asiatic-Pacific Theater on 8 February, and spent the next twenty-two months in the China-Burma-India theater as a pump station operator with the 775th Engineer Petroleum Distribution Company, one of the units that laid and ran the fuel pipeline beside the Ledo Road from Assam through Burma toward China. His campaigns were India-Burma, Central Burma and China Defensive; his decorations the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal, the Good Conduct Medal and the World War II Victory Medal; wounds, none. He left the theater on 11 December 1945, reached home on New Year's Day 1946, and was honorably discharged at Camp Beale as a Technician Fifth Grade on 15 January 1946, five feet five, 150 pounds, blue eyes, blond hair, with $300 in mustering-out pay and his lapel button. The story of that pipeline is told below. In April 1950 the census taker found him at 25, single, working as a brake repairman and living in Burlingame with his stepfather Joseph Rocha, a business partner, his mother, and his sister Patricia, a bookkeeper. He had in fact been married for five weeks. The Carson City, Nevada, marriage index records the marriage of Robert C.

About 1925: Charles Goodwin holding Dolores; Victor, Phillip, Cecelia, Lucille, Joaquin and Angelo Foley; Nora holding baby Robert; and Mary DeRose Foley.

Goodwin and Peggy Fergon, a sergeant's daughter from Pierre, South Dakota, on 28 February 1950, ten days after their first child was born; Nevada asked no waiting period of a couple, and Robert was back at his mother's table when the census taker called. The California Birth Index, which records the mother's maiden name for every birth in the state, gives the couple two daughters: Susan Lenora Goodwin, born 18 February 1950 in Santa Cruz County and named for Robert's mother, and Elizabeth Anne Goodwin, born 29 May 1951 in San Mateo County, at Redwood City. The census taker who wrote Robert down as single in April 1950 was behind the news: Susan had been born in February and her parents had married in Carson City. Peggy was not part of the girls' lives afterward, and the family understands she died in Santa Maria, California. Susan later lived at Boulder Creek in the Santa Cruz Mountains and died a few years ago; the two sisters grew up with five half-brothers from their mother's other marriages, named on Peggy's profile.

The city directories then follow him down the Peninsula. Burlingame lists him in 1946, 1947 and 1948; Redwood City in 1953 has 'Goodwin Robt C (Peggy L) mech' at 221 Alameda de las Pulgas, the last record that shows the couple together; and from 1955 to 1977 he is in San Mateo, a mechanic, in 1969 working for Dick Bullis, the San Mateo car dealer. The 1965, 1966 and 1968 directories give the name in the parentheses that directories reserve for a wife as 'Betty'; Elizabeth, then a teenager living with him, has always gone by Betty, so the compiler most likely wrote down the daughter of the house, though a short second marriage in those years cannot be ruled out. On 26 October 1969, at 44, he married Laverne P. Codoni, 40, in San Mateo; the state index records their divorce in San Mateo County in February 1981. He was living at 1753 South Norfolk Street, San Mateo, in 1993, and died on 13 March 2014, aged 89; the Army serial number on his Fold3 memorial page is the one he was given in 1943. He is the grandfather whose first name Bobby carries.

GRANDMOTHER (MOTHER'S MOTHER)

Peggy Lou Miller 1926–1979

BORN 13 March 1926, Pierre, Hughes County, South Dakota

DIED 27 January 1979, Garden Farms, San Luis Obispo County, California, aged 52; buried Santa Margarita Cemetery

Peggy grew up in Pierre, the small state capital on the Missouri River, the daughter of Arthur Alexander Miller, a First World War artillery sergeant, and Florence Mary Jeffries, whose parents had homesteaded across the river at Fort Pierre. The 1930 census found the family on Sioux Avenue in Pierre: Arthur, 35, caretaker at the government arsenal and a veteran of the World War, Florence, 24, Elizabeth, 7, and Peggy, 4, with three lodgers in the house; in 1940 they were at 207 Dakota Avenue, Peggy 13. Elizabeth, the sister the family knew as Betty, was in fact her half-sister: Elizabeth Ann Miller was born in Pierre on 27 April 1922 to Arthur's first wife, Sarah A. Matthews, whom he had married at Sioux Falls in 1920. At nineteen, on 7 July 1945, Peggy married Rodney Mark Fergon in Pierre. Rodney was a San Mateo boy in uniform, the son of Paul Fergon, a Chicago-born railroad switchman who had lived in San Mateo since the 1930s, which is how a girl from the Missouri River ended up on the San Francisco Peninsula; the young couple went to San Francisco, had two sons in 1946 and 1948, and divorced. Rodney was still in the Air Force in August 1954 when his father, 64, was killed trying to board a freight train at work in the San Francisco yards.

The end of the Fergon marriage can be dated from the San Mateo Times of 13 January 1949, where a notice in the personals reads: 'Notice is hereby given that I, the undersigned, will not be responsible for any debt contracted by PEGGY L. FERGON after Jan. 12, 1949. (Signed) RODNEY M. FERGON SR.' By that year she was with Robert Goodwin, and on 28 February 1950, ten days after Susan was born, the two were married in Carson City, Nevada; the index there has her as Peggy Fergon. Their daughters Susan Lenora, born in Santa Cruz County in February 1950, and Elizabeth Anne, born in Redwood City in May 1951, carry his surname in the state birth index with her maiden name beside it. The 1953 Redwood City directory still lists the couple together at 221 Alameda de las Pulgas, so the marriage lasted at least three years. It then ended, and on 8 December 1959, in Clark County, Nevada, the county of Las Vegas, Peggy Miller, using her maiden name, married Marvin Eugene 'Marvin' Sumner, a San Luis Obispo native born about 1925 to George A. and Gladys Rose Sumner, who ran gas stations in Santa Margarita and Atascadero, booked big-band summer tours across California, and worked for thirty years at Atascadero State Hospital; they had three more sons, and the Sumners settled at Garden Farms, near Atascadero in the North County of San Luis Obispo, where she lived the last 21 years of her life as a homemaker, an American Cancer Society volunteer and secretary of the Santa Margarita Civic Association.

Her seven children, from the state birth index and her obituary: with Rodney Fergon, Rodney Mark Fergon Jr., born 9 July 1946 in San Francisco (living in San Luis Obispo in 1979), and David Richard

Peggy's bronze marker in the Santa Margarita District Cemetery, San Luis Obispo County: 'Peggy L. Sumner, Her Fast Wit Now At Rest, Pierre, S.D., Mar. 13, 1926; Santa Margarita, Ca., Jan. 27, 1979.'

Fergon, born 13 January 1948 in San Francisco (living in Sonoma in 1979); with Robert Goodwin, Susan Lenora, born 18 February 1950 in Santa Cruz County, and Elizabeth Anne, born 29 May 1951 in San Mateo County; and with Marvin Sumner, Michael S. Sumner, born 18 December 1960 in San Luis Obispo County, a year after the wedding, Patrick J. Sumner, born 10 December 1961 in San Luis Obispo County, and Matthew B. Sumner, born 21 April 1965 in San Luis Obispo County, all three of Atascadero in 1979. Elizabeth therefore has, or had, five half-brothers, and the Goodwin family remains in touch with some of them.

She died at home on Saturday, 27 January 1979, at 52. The graveside service was held at two o'clock on Tuesday, 30 January, in the Santa Margarita District Cemetery, and the family asked that memorial gifts go to the American Cancer Society she had volunteered for. Her stone reads 'Her Fast Wit Now At Rest.' The San Luis Obispo Telegram-Tribune listed her survivors: her husband Marvin of Garden Farms, five sons, 'two daughters, Susan Inch of Boulder Creek and Betty Goodwin of San Mateo,' a sister, Betty Bolton of Arizona, and seven grandchildren. Betty Goodwin is Bobby's mother, Elizabeth, who has always been Betty to everyone who knows her. The family had understood that she died in Santa Maria; it was Garden Farms, seventy miles up the same coast. Marvin outlived her by 26 years: he remarried, to Audrey Sims, in 1987, died at Templeton on 17 February 2005 at 79, and his obituary in the Tribune still counted Peggy's children as his own family, 'children, Michael and Tracy of Deer Creek, Minn., Patrick Sumner of Paso Robles and Matthew B. Sumner of Atascadero; four stepchildren, Rodney Fergon of Golden, Colo., David Fergon of Weatherford, Texas, Susan Inch of Boulder Creek and Betty Smith of San Mateo,' Betty Smith being Elizabeth, who has gone by Betty all her life, 'and 12 grandchildren.' The state death index gives her as Peggy Lou Sumner, born 13 March 1926 in South Dakota, died 27 January 1979 in San Luis Obispo County.

Arthur Alexander Miller & Florence Mary Jeffries 1894–1954 · 1904–1974?

BORN Arthur 1 March 1894, Pierre, South Dakota; Florence 7 June 1904 (1905 by her memorial), Fort Pierre, Stanley County, South Dakota

DIED Arthur 25 September 1954, aged 60, buried Riverside Cemetery, Pierre, South Dakota, plot ORIGP SS 1 2; Florence probably 3 October 1974, place not yet found

Arthur was born in Pierre on 1 March 1894, the younger son of Swedish immigrants. His father, Alex B. Miller, born in Sweden in January 1862, had come to America in 1880 and in 1900 was a naturalized citizen and day laborer who owned his own house in Pierre's fourth ward; his mother, Anna Elizabeth Olsson, was also Swedish-born, and the couple had married in 1886. Arthur grew up with William, Lydia and Hilma and a younger sister, Ruth. Family trees give Alex's death as 13 February 1947 and Anna's as 17 February 1938 at Danbury, Wisconsin, dates not yet checked against records. Arthur enlisted on 5 February 1915, went to France as a sergeant of Battery C, 147th Field Artillery, the regiment South Dakota raised from its National Guard, and was honorably discharged on 23 May 1919, service number 139375. His headstone application records the regiment as part of the 41st Division, with which it sailed; its brigade fought at the front attached to the 32nd Division through the summer and autumn of 1918, supporting ten American and French divisions before the Armistice. His flat government headstone in Pierre's Riverside Cemetery reads 'Arthur A. Miller, South Dakota, 1st Sgt Btry C 147 Fld Arty, World War I, March 1, 1894, Sept. 25, 1954,' and the cemetery records his grave as plot ORIGP SS 1 2, in the original section of the grounds. He married twice: Sarah A. Matthews at Sioux Falls on 23 September 1920, who gave him a daughter, Elizabeth Ann, on 27 April 1922, and Florence Jeffries at Rapid City on 20 June 1925; Peggy was born the next spring. In 1930 he was caretaker at the government arsenal in Pierre, and in 1942, at the registration of older men, he described himself as a 'disabled war veteran,' 143 pounds, blue eyes and brown hair. He died on Saturday night, 25 September 1954, at 60, five months after his father-in-law. The Associated Press carried the news across the state under the headline 'Former Legion Head at Pierre Succumbs': Arthur A. 'Cocky' Miller, former commander of Pierre's American Legion Post No. 8, who 'served on the Mexican border in 1916 and in France in World War I,' with funeral services in the Legion cabin on Wednesday morning and burial at Riverside Cemetery. Cocky was the name the town knew him by. The bronze marker was applied for that November by his elder daughter, Mrs Elizabeth A. Bolton, then serving with the 363rd Tactical Reconnaissance Wing at Shaw Air Force Base, South Carolina; Betty, who died on 3 November 1997, was the 'Betty Bolton of Arizona' named in Peggy's obituary.

Florence was born at Fort Pierre, on 7 June 1904 by the Army's reckoning and in 1905 by her memorial's, the old fur-trading post and cattle town across the Missouri from the capital, the daughter of Henry Lawrence Jeffries, born at Mattoon, Illinois, on 4 May 1872, and Margaret Jane 'Maggie' Baynes, born at Kasota, Le Sueur County, Minnesota, on 30 August 1882. Henry's parents, Johnston Jeffris (1849–1916) and Florence Sutton (1854–1925), for whom Florence was named, brought their large family from Coles

County, Illinois, to Clark County, Dakota Territory, in the early 1880s and ended their days at Fort Pierre. In 1900 Henry and Maggie were both working at Aberdeen, South Dakota, she as a hotel dining-room girl; they married on 10 December 1901, apparently at Huron, took up land across the river from Pierre, and ranched in the Fort Pierre country for fifty years. They are buried together in Fort Pierre's Cedar Hill Cemetery; Margaret died in 1953 and Henry the following spring at Deadwood in the Black Hills, aged 81. Florence had a brother Lawrence, sisters Eleanor and Marie, and a little brother Jay who died at two. Her father's youngest brother was the family's celebrity: Zay Jeffries, born at Willow Lake in 1888, became one of the country's leading metallurgists, a vice-president of General Electric, winner of the John Fritz Medal in 1946 and an adviser to the Manhattan Project. Her father's 1954 obituary adds one arresting line: it lists among his survivors 'Mrs. Florence Miller, who is serving in the WAC Corps of the United States Army in Japan.' At 49, a widow of a few months, Bobby's great-grandmother was a soldier in the Women's Army Corps on the far side of the Pacific. The Army's own records fill in the outline. On 10 July 1943, at 39, married and giving her home as Furnas County, Nebraska, Florence M. Miller enlisted in the Women's Army Corps at Omaha, a private assigned to the Quartermaster Corps, a high-school graduate whose civilian work was accounting, service number A-703617. The Veterans Administration's death file for a Florence M. Miller born 7 June 1904, Army, entered 1 July 1943 and released 1 April 1964, died 3 October 1974, is almost certainly hers, which would make her a twenty-year soldier who died at 70. Her Find a Grave memorial records only the birth at Fort Pierre; where she died and where she is buried are still to be found. These four people, and the Jeffries and Baynes families behind them, are the newest quarter of Bobby's tree, found on the day this page was finished.

Charles Herbert Goodwin 1897–1985

BORN 20 September 1897, Clayton, Kansas

DIED 12 October 1985, Martinez, California; buried Oak Hill Cemetery, Red Bluff

Charles was the fourth of Sam and Flora Goodwin's ten children, born in a sod house near Clayton in northwest Kansas. He was two when the family moved to the mill town of Tenino, Washington, and grew up between there and the Kansas farms. The family came to Red Bluff around 1917; Charles served in the Army in the First World War, entering on 2 January 1918 and mustering out at Red Bluff on 11 October 1919. The 1920 census lists him as a 23-year-old laborer on his father's hay farm at Dairyville. His younger brother Joel Samuel Goodwin, born at Norton, Kansas, in 1899, married Cora Ina Grissom of the Red Bluff Grissom family in 1922, had two sons, Arthur (1923–2013) and Elmer (1925–2006), and was killed in the woods near Olympia, Washington, on 31 December 1926, at 27, working in the timber where the family had lived at the turn of the century. He was brought home to Oak Hill in Red Bluff. Their brother Harry remembered the death in his letters thirty years later.

On 21 November 1921 he married seventeen-year-old Nora Foley in Red Bluff, in a ceremony performed by Father Philip F. Brady, a Catholic priest, with the written consent of the bride's father. Four children followed in six years: Dolores (1923–2009, later Mrs Farrell) in Tehama County, Robert in Tehama County, Harold Philip (born at Cottage Grove, Oregon, on 8 December 1926, died 2002) and Patricia (1928–2015) in Humboldt County, a trail that shows the young family following work north. The marriage ended around 1930. Charles married again, to Susie Marie Jones (1902–1969), and in 1942 was living at Summit City in Shasta County, the construction camp town for Shasta Dam, though a cousin's tree places him in Los Angeles when his father died that April; Susie died in Tehama County in February 1969, and he married Jane Beggs later that year, and died in Martinez in 1985 at 88; the state death index gives the dates as 20 September 1897 to 12 October 1985, Contra Costa County, and his mother's maiden name as Clark. He was brought home to Red Bluff and buried under a veteran's stone at Oak Hill, near his parents.

Charles's military headstone at Oak Hill Cemetery, Red Bluff: 'US Army, World War I'.

GREAT - GRANDMOTHER

Lenora 'Nora' Augusta Foley 1904–1998

BORN 4 August 1904, Red Bluff, Tehama County, California

DIED 13 January 1998, Burlingame, California, aged 93; buried Skylawn Memorial Park, San Mateo, beside Joseph Rocha

Nora was the third of nine children born to Pinkney Foley and Mary Clara DeRose in Red Bluff, in a household that was half Irish-Missouri and half Portuguese. She married Charles Goodwin at seventeen, three months after her father's death, with her brother Antone as witness, and had four children by the time she was 23. Family photographs from the Foley book show her in a cloche hat between her brothers Victor and Tony beside a Model A, and holding baby Robert in the family portrait of about 1925.

After her first marriage ended she married Joseph Perry Rocha, a Humboldt County man of Azorean parents, at Gold Beach, Oregon, on 5 May 1933, and Joseph raised Robert and Patricia as his own. The 1930 census had found her, at 25, keeping the house at 539 J Street in Eureka as its head, with four children under seven and Charles's brother Albert boarding; in 1940 she was Lanora Rocha at 517 Shotwell Street in San Francisco's Mission District with Dolores, Robert, Harold and Patricia; and the 1950 census places Joseph and Lenora, both 45, on Channing Road in Burlingame with Robert and Patricia. They settled in Burlingame by 1949, where Joseph was a partner in a business. Nora was widowed in 1973 and lived another quarter century, dying in Burlingame on 13 January 1998 at 93. She is buried beside Joseph on the ridge above San Mateo at Skylawn Memorial Park, under a shared bronze marker lettered ROCHA in the Pacific View section; her daughter Patricia Mae Goodwin (1928–2015) lies in the same section. She is the grandmother Bobby's mother knew as Nora Rocha.

STEP-GREAT-GRANDFATHER (RAISED ROBERT FROM 1933)

Joseph Parra 'Perry' Rocha 1904-1973

BORN 12 June 1904, Arcata, Humboldt County, California

DIED 8 February 1973, San Mateo, California, aged 68; buried Skylawn Memorial Park, San Mateo, Pacific View section

Joseph was the son of Manuel Prieria Rocha, who came from the Azores in 1898, and Anna Borges Laurenço, born about 1882 at Angra do Heroísmo on the island of Terceira. He grew up among the Portuguese dairy families of Arcata, lost his mother at fourteen, and married Nora Goodwin in 1933. His business was a tire company, the Panko and Rocha Tire Company of San Mateo and Burlingame, and its shop stood at 247 California Drive in Burlingame, where Robert worked for him in 1943 and was still repairing brakes in 1950; the census that year lists Joseph as head of the household at 14 Channing Road, a business proprietor and partner, with Robert and Patricia recorded as his children, and Robert's draft card calls him plainly 'father.' The San Mateo Times obituary of 9 February 1973 returned the compliment. Joseph P. Rocha, 68, of 14 Channing Road, had died at Mills Hospital the day before after an illness, a retired partner in the tire company, a native of Arcata who had lived on the Peninsula 32 years, a member of the San Mateo Elks, Redwood Parlor No. 66 of the Native Sons of the Golden West, the Eagles and the Portuguese I.D.E.S. lodge of Half Moon Bay; and it listed his survivors as his wife Lenora, 'two sons, Robert and Harold Goodwin, both of San Mateo; two daughters, Mrs. Delores Farrell of Redwood City and Miss Patricia Goodwin of Burlingame,' two brothers and six sisters. He is not a blood ancestor, but he was the grandfather figure in the house where Bobby's grandfather grew up, and FamilySearch itself lists Robert as his son. The Foley book gives his middle name as Perry; his grave marker at Skylawn, which he shares with Nora, records it as Parra.

GREAT - GREAT - GRANDFATHER

Samuel Wilbur Goodwin 1862–1942

BORN 15 October 1862, Jefferson County, Iowa

DIED 27 April 1942, Red Bluff, California; buried Oak Hill Cemetery

Sam's father Miles, a Quaker's son, died when Sam was two. By 1870 the seven-year-old was living with a neighbor family in Macon County, Illinois, and at seventeen he was a hired laborer in another household, so he grew up essentially on his own. He married Flora Clark near Norton, Kansas, on 24 January 1888, and for the next thirty years could not stay put: a covered wagon to Custer County, Nebraska, where they built a sod house; back to Kansas, where he dug another sod house into a bank at Clayton, roofed with willows and sod a foot thick; to Tenino, Washington, in 1900, where he ran the engine at the sawmill for sixteen years; back to Norton to farm; back to Washington; and at last, around 1917, to Red Bluff.

His son Harry remembered him as a man 'always getting tired of a place' who was 'always killing rattlesnakes,' and who once fished small Mary out of a well with a rope and a mirror to throw sunlight down the shaft. In Tehama County he farmed hay at Dairyville and then lived at 416 Lincoln Street in Red Bluff, an invalid for his last six years. He belonged to the Church of God. The Red Bluff Daily News reported his death at 79 in April 1942, survived by his widow and nine children; he was buried at Oak Hill.

Flora Nancy Clark 1868–1960

BORN 5 November 1868, Bethel, Windsor County, Vermont

DIED 4 February 1960, Red Bluff, California; buried Oak Hill Cemetery

Flora was born in the Green Mountains and taken to the Kansas plains as a girl of eleven. She married Sam Goodwin at nineteen and bore ten children in sod houses and mill towns across four states, all of whom lived to adulthood. Her son Harry's letters preserve her: fainting when a rattlesnake hung down from the rafters and rattled while she was carrying Ed, raising chickens and a garden with the children, running out with a hoe when a rat bit off the end of Harry's finger.

Widowed in 1942 after 54 years of marriage, she wrote a memorial for Sam that ends 'We miss him very much but would not wish him here in this troubled world.' In the Christmas flood of 1955, when the Feather River levee broke and drowned Yuba City, 87-year-old Flora and her son Al climbed into the attic and spent the night on the rafters above the water until Al punched a hole in the roof and hailed a helicopter, which lifted them off. 'Can you beat that?' Harry wrote. She recovered after two days in an Army hospital and died in Red Bluff four years later at 91. Her grave records her as Flora Nancy Clark Johnston.

Pinkney Pearl Foley 1872-1923

BORN 29 September 1872, Jasper County, Missouri

DIED 13 August 1923, Red Bluff, California; buried St. Mary's Cemetery

Pinkney was the seventh of eleven children of a restless Kentucky-born farmer and Civil War militiaman, Alexander Allen Foley, and his wife Nancy, who had eloped to Kansas to marry. His father died when he was nine, and his mother kept the family by weaving carpets at home. In 1897 he came to Red Bluff with his widowed mother and two brothers to join married siblings already in California and Oregon.

On 1 September 1900 he married Mary Clara DeRose, the Red Bluff-born daughter of Portuguese immigrants, and they had nine children over the next seventeen years: Antone, Theodore, Lenora, Victor, Phillip, Cecelia, Mary Lucille, Joaquin and Angelo. He registered for the First World War draft at 45. He died in August 1923 at 50, twenty-one months after his daughter Nora's wedding, and was buried in the Catholic cemetery, St. Mary's, where a granite stone lettered FOLEY now covers him, Mary Clara and their eldest son Antone. The stone gives his birth year as 1873; the family book and the county birth index say 1872.

Mary Clara DeRose 1880-1957

BORN 15 January 1880 (family records say 9 December 1879), Red Bluff, California

DIED 18 November 1957, Red Bluff; buried St. Mary's Cemetery

Mary Clara was born in Red Bluff to Antone DeRose of the island of Pico in the Azores and Mary Augusta Rodrigues of Madeira, who had married in Tehama County the year before. She grew up speaking Portuguese in a town with a sizable Azorean community, married Pinkney Foley at twenty, and raised nine children, several of whom carried Portuguese names: Antone, Joaquin, Angelo. Widowed at 43 with children from six to 22 at home, she stayed in Red Bluff the rest of her life and outlived two sons. Antone, the eldest, called Tony, worked for Pacific Gas and Electric; a photograph in the Foley book shows him beside his P.G.&E. truck, loaded with coils of rope, at a substation. He married twice, Mary Ann Rose in Red Bluff in 1927 and Ellen Estella Thun in Chico in 1932, and had sons Herbert (1928-2018) and Robert (1933-1996). On 15 September 1938 he was burned by a high-tension wire and he died in a Redding hospital a month later at 37; his funeral was at Sacred Heart Catholic church, and his obituary lists his sisters, among them 'Mrs. Nora Rocha of San Francisco.' Her own sister Pauline had married Pinkney's brother James, who was killed by electric shock in 1907, so electricity took both a brother-in-law and a son from her. Theodore died in 1954 at 51 and lies at Oak Hill. Mary Clara died in 1957 at 77 and was buried under the Foley stone at St. Mary's with Pinkney and Tony. The wedding portrait of Mary Clara and Pinkney, and the page of nine oval portraits of their children, come from the Foley book compiled by a descendant, Ann McClellan, in 1986.

Miles Goodwin 1829–1865

BORN 30 October 1829, Preble County, Ohio

DIED 12 March 1865, Pleasant Plain, Jefferson County, Iowa

Miles was raised in the Quaker meeting at Elk Creek in Preble County, Ohio, the son of Joseph Goodwin and Mary Hixson, who had married 'in meeting' in 1822. On 23 June 1851 he took out a license to marry eighteen-year-old Martha Sloat, who was not a Friend; a month later the Elk Monthly Meeting recorded him disowned 'for disunity,' the Quaker penalty for marrying out. The couple farmed in Ohio and then in Jefferson County, Iowa, and had seven children. Miles died there in March 1865 at 35, in the last weeks of the Civil War, leaving Martha with children aged twelve down to one, Sam among them.

Martha Sloat (Schlott) c.1832–1894

BORN about 1832, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania

DIED 10 January 1894, Dewitt, Washington County, Kansas

Martha's family were Pennsylvania Germans: her father John Philip Schlott was christened in the Lutheran church at Windsor Township, York County, in 1802, and her grandfather Michael Schlott came from Germany. The name was anglicized to Sloat. Martha's mother died when she was small, and by 1850 the seventeen-year-old was living with a farm family in Preble County, Ohio, where she met Miles Goodwin. Widowed at about 32 with seven children, she was received into the Pleasant Plain Friends meeting in Iowa in September 1865, remarried an Irish-born farmer, James Mathews, in Logan County, Illinois, in 1868, and moved with him to Norton County, Kansas, by 1880, which is how the Goodwins came to Norton. She died in Kansas in 1894.

Henry Clark 1832–1905

BORN 1 September 1832, Highgate, Franklin County, Vermont

DIED 21 January 1905, Corpus Christi, Texas

Henry married Nancy Dow at Randolph, Vermont, on 26 September 1857 and served in the Union Army; a Texas newspaper later called him 'the old federal soldier.' The couple lived in northern New York, then back in Bethel, Vermont, where Flora was born, and then went west with their children to Kansas. The marriage did not last: Nancy remarried in 1892, and Henry drifted to Beaver County in the Oklahoma panhandle and finally to Corpus Christi, where he died in 1905, 'a cripple' who 'had recently lost his wife and advertised and got another one,' as his obituary put it. He is buried in Bayview Cemetery there.

Nancy Wilbur Dow 1843–1917

BORN 14 October 1843, Bethel, Windsor County, Vermont

DIED 2 January 1917, Norton, Kansas; buried Norton Cemetery

Nancy came from old New England stock; her Dow ancestors were at Hampton, New Hampshire, in the 1640s, and her father Alphonso was a blacksmith who ended his days in Colorado. She married Henry Clark at thirteen or fourteen, bore eleven children, and by 1885 was homesteading in Custer County, Nebraska, which is why her daughter Flora and Sam Goodwin drove their covered wagon there to build a sod house near 'Grandmother.' She married John Jefferson Rollings in 1892, moved to Norton County, Kansas, and died there in 1917.

Alexander Allen Foley 1835–1882

BORN 13 November 1835, Madison County, Kentucky

DIED 29 June 1882, Carthage, Jasper County, Missouri; buried Stafford Cemetery

'Allen,' as he was known, was fifteen when his father sold the farm on Paint Lick Creek and moved the family to Platte County, Missouri, in 1851. On 1 March 1857, in the company of two friends and his brother-in-law, he and Nancy Elizabeth Henson eloped across the river to Atchison, Kansas Territory, and were married. They lived in Kickapoo Township near Leavenworth during the Bleeding Kansas years, then drifted back to Missouri, to Barton, Ray and finally Jasper County. In the war he served as a private in Company D of the 82nd Regiment, Enrolled Missouri Militia, the Union home-guard regiment of Platte and Clay counties under Colonel James H. Moss; Company D was the Weston company, raised under Captain Washington T. Woods a few miles from where the Hensons farmed. The family book dates his enlistment to November 1862 and calls the unit the 82nd Missouri Mounted Infantry; the state's muster rolls record the regiment's enrollment in the autumn of 1863 and its service into 1864. Either way he wore blue in a slaveholding river county where many neighbours did not.

The family history describes him as 'a farmer, but had difficulty finding an area that satisfied him.' He and Nancy had eleven children. In June 1882, four months after his eldest daughter's wedding, he died of a bowel obstruction at 47. A month later Nancy gave birth to twin girls who died the same day.

His granite marker in Jasper County carries his war service, 'Mo. Militia, 82 Reg. Co. D,' beneath a Masonic square and compasses, so he was also a Freemason, and an epitaph in the old manner: 'Farewell my wife and children all, from you a father Christ doth call; mourn not for me, it is in vain to call me to your sight again.' The centre panel remembers the twin daughters, one day old, 1 August 1882. The right panel is a memorial to Nancy, 12 December 1840 to 18 December 1907, who is buried far away at Oak Hill in Red Bluff; the family records give her death as 8 December, the stone as the 18th.

Alexander Allen Foley and Nancy Elizabeth Henson, the restored portrait that opens the Foley book.

Nancy Elizabeth Henson 1840–1907

BORN 12 December 1840, Platte County area, Missouri

DIED 8 (or 18) December 1907, Red Bluff, California; buried Foley plot, Oak Hill Cemetery

Nancy was the eldest of the eleven children of William B. Henson and Nancy Vaughn, born in far western Missouri the year her parents married there. She was sixteen when she ran off to Kansas with Allen Foley. Widowed at 42 with five children under sixteen, she 'earned a living for her family as a carpet weaver in her home.' In 1897, with several of her married children already in California and Oregon, she moved to Red Bluff with her three unmarried sons; her brother Edgar came too and lived with them for a time. Her youngest, James Matthew Foley, had married Pauline Florence DeRose, the younger sister of his brother Pinkney's wife Mary Clara, so two Foley brothers married two DeRose sisters and their children were double cousins. James was killed by an electric shock while working at a Red Bluff packing house on 18 January 1907, at 27, leaving Pauline with two small sons, Frank William (1903–1978) and Alvin Robert (born 1905); the clipping is headed 'James M. Foley killed by shock.' Nancy died eleven months later, in December 1907, having spent her last years with her daughter Nellie Grey Davis, and was the first of the Foleys buried in the family plot at Oak Hill. Electricity took a second Foley of the next generation, her grandson Tony, in 1938.

Antone DeRose (António da Rosa) 1855–1919

BORN 30 May 1855, Ilha do Pico, Azores, Portugal

DIED 25 July 1919, Red Bluff, California

Antone was born on Pico, the volcanic island in the central Azores whose whalers and farmers left in great numbers for California in the nineteenth century. He emigrated about 1870 as a teenager and made his way to Tehama County, where a Portuguese community was forming around Red Bluff. On 21 March 1879 he married Mary Augusta Rodrigues, herself newly arrived from Madeira, and the couple appear in every census from 1880 to 1910 in Red Bluff, where they raised five children: Mary Clara, Frank, Pauline Florence, William and a fifth daughter. His parents are recorded as Ricardo da Rosa and Maria Clara Gonçalves, the latter christened at Flamengos on the neighboring island of Faial in 1832.

Mary Augusta Rodrigues 1858–1926

BORN 18 April 1858, Madeira (Funchal), Portugal

DIED 22 December 1926, Red Bluff, California

Mary Augusta came from Madeira, the Atlantic island 600 miles southeast of the Azores, the daughter of João Augusto Rodrigues. She emigrated about 1877 at nineteen and within two years had married Antone DeRose in Tehama County. She outlived her husband and two of her sons, Frank in 1908 and William in 1914, and died in Red Bluff three days before Christmas 1926. Her portrait survives on an ornate calling card printed with roses and lilies of the valley, the only image of her that has come down.

Deeper roots

Beyond the fourth great-grandparents the trail runs into colonial America and Europe: Connecticut and Rhode Island in the 1630s, Virginia in the 1650s, Dutch Brooklyn, Alsace and Switzerland, Yorkshire and Worcestershire, Pico and Madeira.

Read this part with the right amount of salt. Everything above generation 5 comes from the shared, user-edited FamilySearch tree, not from records checked one by one for this project. The New England and Utah lines there are generally well documented; the colonial Virginia and Kentucky links are thinner, and three of the grandest names below are almost certainly wishful. The tables list what the tree records; the notables table says how much to trust each claim.

Open questions, and where the answers are

A family tree is never done. These are the six threads most worth pulling next.

The Swedish Millers of Pierre

Arthur Miller's parents are now named: Alex B. Miller, born in Sweden in January 1862, in America from 1880, and Anna Elizabeth Olsson, also Swedish-born, married in 1886; Ancestry trees give their deaths as 13 February 1947 and 17 February 1938 at Danbury, Wisconsin, dates not yet verified. Where in Sweden they came from, and their own parents, would come from the Swedish parish registers once an emigration record is found; the 1880 arrival and any Dakota Territory homestead file are the next step. Florence's parents, Henry Lawrence Jeffries (1872–1954) and Margaret Jane Baynes (1882–1953), are placed, and a cousin's tree carries the Jeffries line back to Johnston Jeffris and Florence Sutton of Coles County, Illinois, and the Baynes line to John M. Baynes of Kasota, Minnesota; the Illinois and Minnesota records behind those names have not yet been checked.

Marian Louise Martin's parents, and her life after 1970

Marian is confirmed as Bobby's grandmother by the birth index and the 1950 census, and the Worcester censuses of 1930 and 1940 show her growing up as a ward of the City of Worcester in the Schleyer household at 641 Lincoln Street, with a twin named May and a Lithuanian-born mother. The Massachusetts birth index has no Marion or May Martin born at Worcester in 1925–27; its one candidate is a Marion Martin born in 1925 at Millville, a mill village in the south of Worcester County (volume 81, page 311), and the certificate behind that entry would name the parents. The records of Worcester's overseers of the poor, which placed the twins with the Schleyers, are another route, and May Martin's later life may be the easier thread to pull. After her second divorce in Reno in 1970 Marian disappears from the indexes; a Nevada or California death record under Holbrook or a later name would close the question.

Where the 775th's pump stations stood

Robert's discharge answers the big question: the 775th Engineer Petroleum Distribution Company, pump station operator, India-Burma, Central Burma and China Defensive, overseas from January 1944 to December 1945. The company's own records, morning reports and unit history, are at the National Archives (Record Group 407 and the morning reports at St. Louis) and would say which stations on the Assam-Burma-China pipeline were his, and whether he ever crossed into China.

The horse-and-buggy story

Family lore says a relative died in a horse-and-buggy accident. No such death has yet been found in the records. The Red Bluff Daily News rules out one candidate: Frank DeRose, Nora's uncle, died at home on Jackson Street on 14 June 1908, aged 26, of typhoid pneumonia after ten days' illness, an employee of the Diamond Match Company. The remaining candidates are William DeRose (died 1914), Charles Edgar Foley (died 1916) and, on the father's side, Dee Oviatt of Farmington, Utah (died 1887); the Red Bluff and Utah papers for those years are the place to look.

Robert's later life

The San Mateo directories list a 'Betty' with Robert from 1965 to 1968, before his 1969 marriage to Laverne Codoni. Elizabeth was called Betty and lived with him then, so it is probably her, but a second marriage in those years is possible; the county's marriage records would settle it. His 2014 obituary has not yet been found.

Raymond's eighteen days

Missing Air Crew Report 4728 is now on this page: he bailed out south-east of Cori at 7:55 on 8 May 1944 and his parachute was seen to open. How he lived for eighteen days behind the German lines and reached the Anzio breakout is not in the report. The 324th Fighter Group's May 1944 history and any escape-and-evasion statement he gave on return (National Archives, Record Group 498) would finish the story.

The Portuguese parishes

Antone DeRose was born on Pico and his mother was christened at Flamengos on Faial in 1832; Mary Augusta Rodrigues came from Madeira. The Azorean and Madeiran parish registers are online and could carry these lines back several more generations.

Charles Goodwin's war

His headstone says US Army, World War I, and a record dated October 1919 places him at Red Bluff. His service record would say where he served.

Mount Pisgah Monument

"One could not ask for a more picturesque, final resting place." I thought as I walked through the memorial grounds of Mount Pisgah. As I walked closer to its column-like memorial, I was thinking about the premature deaths of Nancy Reeder Workman and her son, Samuel. I thought about their suffering "For the Gospel's Sake" and felt sorrow that they were unable to continue on with their family to Utah.

Once I stood before the tall monument, however, my sadness turned to gratitude because their tribulations were not forgotten. Oliver B. Huntington, son of Mount Pisgah's first president, and others contributed time and donations, so that all who died at Mount Pisgah would have a secluded, park-like sanctuary in their honor.

I read the list of names carved upon the white, wooden memorial, which was erected in 1888 by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Descendants of Nancy Workman may feel pleased to know that Nancy and Samuel are among those names inscribed.

Mount Pisgah, Iowa.
