

Goodwin & Oviatt Lines

Thirteen generations behind Bobby Goodwin: Utah pioneers who left Nauvoo with handcarts and ox teams, Kentucky and Missouri farmers who eloped across the river to Kansas, Quakers disowned for love, Portuguese islanders who came to Red Bluff, and a fighter pilot who walked home through occupied Italy.

Traced from the family's own records for Robert Anthony Goodwin, born 1983, by his wife Grace Marie Goodwin, née Sainz, and for their daughter Elizabeth Lenora Goodwin, born 2017, who carries every one of these names forward.

2,030 named ancestors found	14 generations, back to the 1500s	31 full life profiles	24 photographs and documents
1843 Dee Oviatt born in Nauvoo	1857 the Foleys elope to Kansas

Charles Goodwin (holding Dolores), Victor, Phillip, Cecelia, Lucille, Joaquin, Anglio, Nora (holding Robert) and Mary DeRose Foley

About 1925, Red Bluff. Charles Goodwin holding Dolores; Nora's brothers Victor, Phillip, Joaquin and Angelo and sisters Cecelia and Lucille; Nora holding baby Robert, Bobby's grandfather; and Mary DeRose Foley, his great-great-grandmother. From the Foley family book compiled in 1986.

TWO RIVERS

Where the lines come from

Bobby's mother's people and his father's people were two thousand miles apart in 1850 and did not meet until the 1970s on the San Francisco Peninsula. Each side has a character of its own.

FATHER'S SIDE • OVIATT

Nauvoo, Farmington, Parker

Every great-great-grandparent on this side was a Latter-day Saint pioneer who crossed the plains between 1848 and 1856 and settled in Farmington, Utah, north of Salt Lake City: the Oviatts, Workmans, Millers, Biglers, Leonards and Meadowses. Behind them stand New England Puritans and Rhode Island Baptists of the 1630s, Dutch Brooklyn ferrymen, a Walloon founder of Staten Island, Swiss-Alsatian Biglers, and four soldiers of the Revolution. In 1907 two Farmington children, Walter Oviatt and Amy Miller, married in Idaho; their son Raymond was Bobby's grandfather.

MOTHER'S SIDE • GOODWIN AND FOLEY

Kentucky, Missouri, the Azores, Red Bluff

Three streams meet in Red Bluff, Tehama County, around 1900 and 1920: the Foleys, Kentucky Baptists turned Missouri farmers who came west in 1897; the DeRose and Rodrigues families from the Portuguese islands of Pico and Madeira, who came in the 1870s; and the Goodwins, Quaker-descended wanderers who left Iowa and Kansas by covered wagon and arrived about 1917 by way of Nebraska and Washington. Their grandson Robert Charles Goodwin, born in 1925, was Bobby's grandfather, and Bobby carries the Goodwin name.

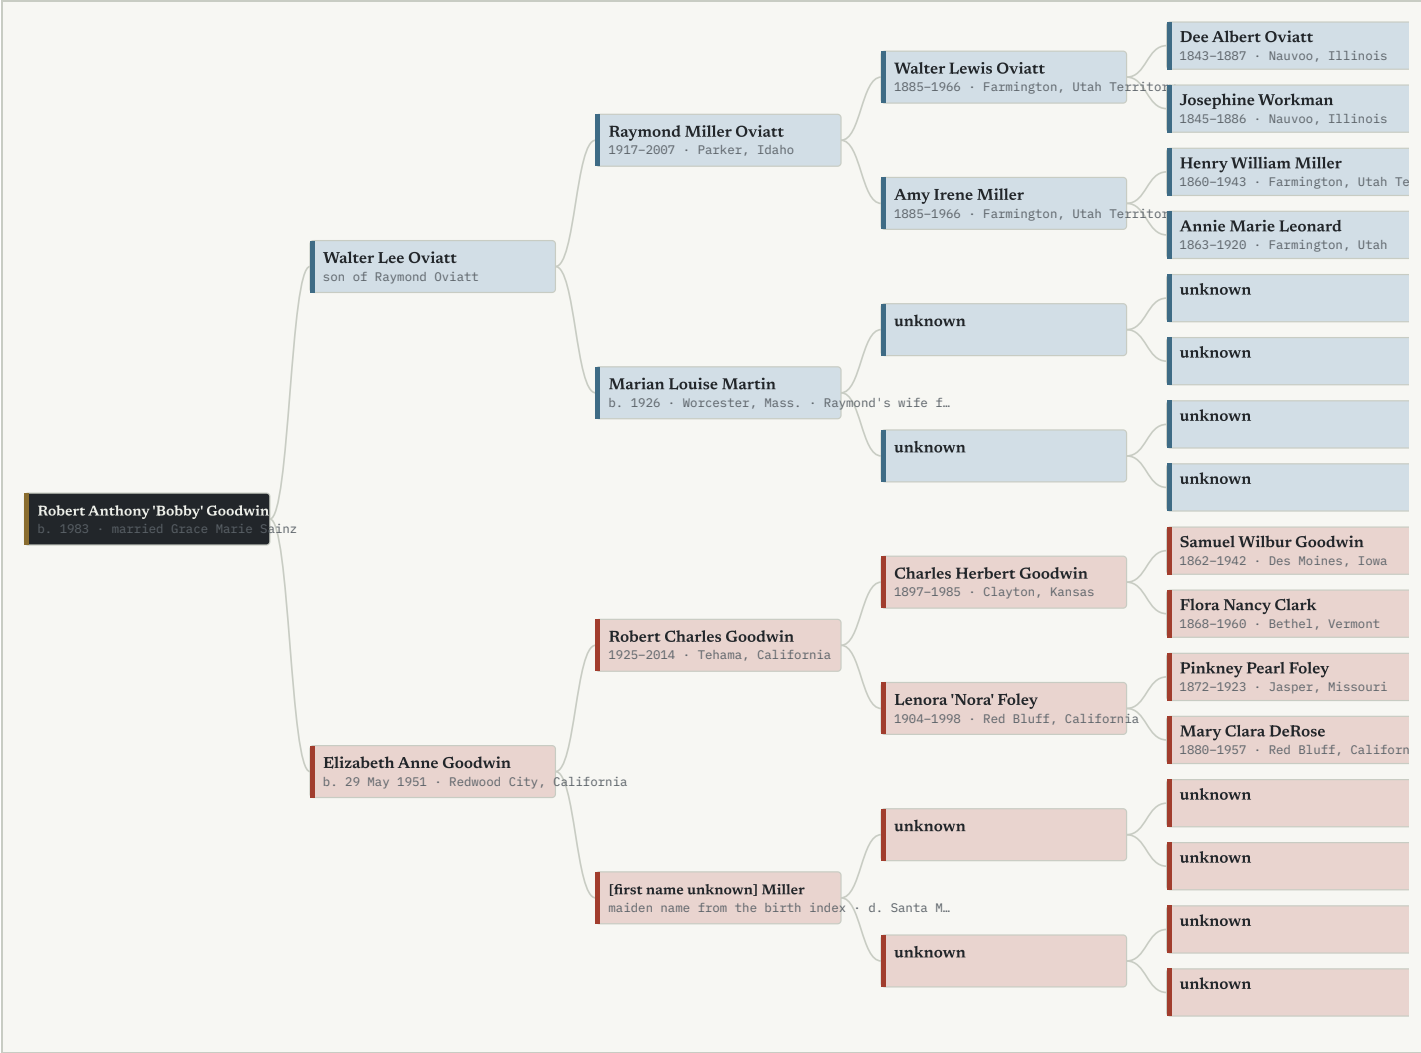

THE NAMES

What Bobby and his daughter carry

Bobby is Robert, like his grandfather Robert Charles Goodwin, who was Charles after his own father Charles Herbert. His daughter is Elizabeth Lenora: Elizabeth for Bobby's mother, and before her Elizabeth Boatright of Virginia and Elizabeth Hancock of Kentucky; Lenora for Lenora 'Nora' Foley, the Red Bluff girl who married at seventeen and lived to 93, her great-great-grandmother. And whether or not anyone intended it, Anthony echoes the name that runs through Nora's Portuguese family: her grandfather Antone DeRose, her uncle Antone Allen Foley and her brother Antone 'Tony' Foley, all of them António in the old country.

The tree at a glance

Bobby at the left; each column to the right is one generation back, to his sixteen great-great-grandparents. Blue is his father's side, red his mother's. Scroll sideways on a phone. The full record behind every name is in the sections below.

● Oviatt side (father) ● Goodwin and Foley side (mother)

Places are birthplaces. Two slots are still open: the first name of Robert Goodwin's wife, whose maiden name Miller comes from her daughters' birth index entries, and confirmation of Walter Oviatt's mother.

Things worth telling at the table

The best of what the records hold, in roughly the order a life would meet them: the pilot, the pioneers, the elopement, the islands, the sod houses.

ITALY, 8 MAY 1944

Eighteen days behind the lines

Second Lieutenant Raymond Oviatt was 26, a farm boy from Parker, Idaho, with a degree from the Southern Branch in Pocatello and a job history at a Salt Lake drive-in. He had been overseas seven weeks, flying P-40 Warhawks with the 315th Fighter Squadron of the 324th Fighter Group over the stalled Italian front, when on 8 May 1944 his plane, serial 42-10917, did not come back. The Army opened Missing Air Crew Report 4728. On 25 May the Salt Lake Telegram printed his photograph under the headline 'Flier Missing.'

What happened next is told in two more clippings. He had bailed out over enemy territory and spent eighteen days there, in a countryside crowded with German troops, before reaching Allied lines and reporting back to his unit around the end of May. His parents learned he was safe on Saturday, 10 June; the following Thursday morning he walked through the door at 1095 South Ninth East on a 21-day leave, having told nobody he was coming. The Deseret News photographed him with his sister, Mrs. Fred C. Huth, and quoted everything he would say about it: 'I was forced to bail out over enemy territory. I remained there for 18 days.' The Missing Air Crew Report index lists his status as POW, so it is possible he was captured and got away; the family papers say only that he came home. A year later the Tribune noted that First Lieutenant Raymond M. Oviatt was a test pilot at Fort Sumner, New Mexico.

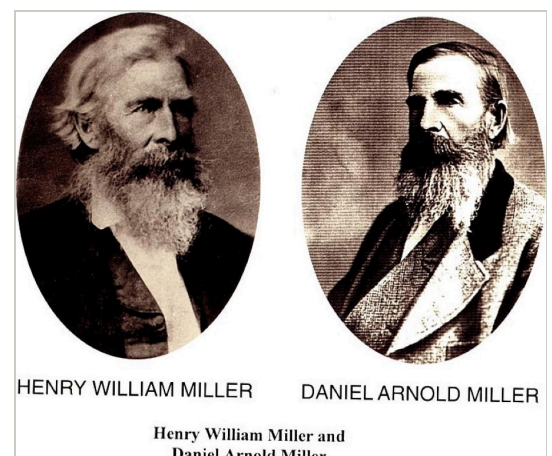

The Salt Lake clipping the family kept:
'Failed to return from raid over Italy.'

NAUVOO TO THE VALLEY, 1839-1856

Five pioneer families who met in one town

Every one of Bobby's father's great-great-grandparents was a Latter-day Saint pioneer, and all of them ended up in the same small town. Ira and Ruth Oviatt joined the church about 1839 in New York, lived at Kirtland and Nauvoo, buried two little boys in Nauvoo, and crossed the plains in 1851. Jacob Workman brought his family from Tennessee to Nauvoo in 1842, lost his wife Nancy Reader at Mount Pisgah during the 1846 exodus, and reached the valley in 1848 with three-year-old Josephine. Daniel Miller, a Quincy mill owner ordained by Joseph Smith, and Hannah Bigler, whose brother's diary would date the gold discovery at Sutter's Mill, drove their oxen and one horse team into the valley on 4 September 1848 and were among the five families who founded Farmington that autumn. Truman Leonard came in 1850, went to India as a missionary, and walked back in 1856 beside the handcarts. Mary Ann Meadows pulled one of those handcarts.

Daniel Arnold Miller (right), who turned Farmington's first furrow in 1848, with his brother Henry.

Within a generation the families were intermarried: Dee Oviatt (born in Nauvoo in 1843) married Josephine Workman (born in Nauvoo in 1845); Henry Miller married Annie Leonard; and their children Walter Oviatt and Amy Miller, both born in Farmington in 1885, married at Parker, Idaho, on New Year's Day 1907. Their son was Raymond, the pilot.

FARMINGTON, 31 OCTOBER 1886

The baby in the blacksmith shop

Two months after his wife Josephine died, Dee Oviatt sat down in Farmington to answer a letter from his sister. He wrote about the wheat he had raised, 287 bushels, and the peaches rotting on the ground for want of gathering, and about the shop: 'I have lots of work in the shop that takes my mind off my trouble. I think if I could not work, I would go crazy. We were just getting so we could live comfortable. We had got two of our rooms papered and fixed up so that we could enjoy ourselves when we had company and now I can't bear to think the Lord's will be done.'

Then he wrote about his youngest: 'We call our baby Walter Lewis. The older one is John Fred. We lost a girl between them, Caroline Esteela. She was as pretty as a picture and smart as could be... The baby is in the shop with me most of the time. He can tell how the cow and sheep, pigs, dogs and horse and rooster goes. He can mock them nicely. He can call all of us by our names. He is getting as fat as a little pig. He has slept with me on the floor ever since his mother was taken sick. He is the best little fellow in the country.' Dee died ten weeks later, on 2 January 1887. Walter Lewis Oviatt, the baby who mocked the rooster, was Bobby's great-great-grandfather; he grew up with his brother Jack and sister Josephine, farmed in Idaho, and lived to see his own son come home from the war.

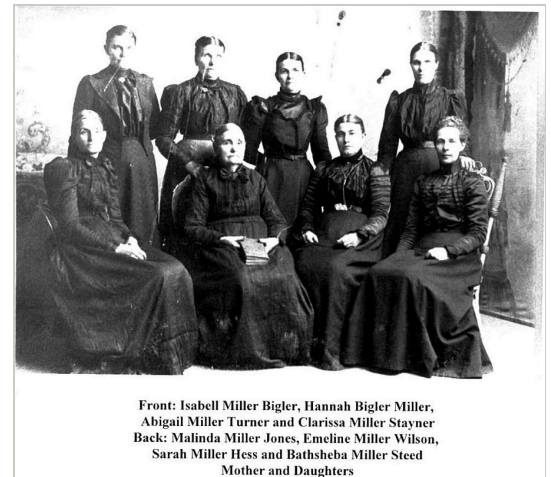

Dee Oviatt's letter to his sister, transcribed by a descendant.

COLOMA, 24 JANUARY 1848

The diary that dated the Gold Rush

Hannah Bigler's older brother Henry, born like her at Shinnston in the hills of western Virginia, marched to California with the Mormon Battalion in 1846 and, when the battalion was discharged, took work building a sawmill for John Sutter on the American River. He kept a diary. On the night of 24 January 1848 he wrote: 'this day some kind of mettle was found in the tail race that looks like goald first discovered by martial, the boss of the mill.' James Marshall himself kept no record, and when the date of the discovery was later disputed, it was Henry Bigler's diary, corroborated by a fellow battalion veteran, that settled it. The diary is at the Huntington Library today.

Hannah, meanwhile, was at Winter Quarters with her husband Daniel Miller and two babies. That spring she drove the family's one-horse team across the plains, arrived in the Salt Lake Valley in September 1848, and helped found Farmington. She had ten children and outlived Daniel by 24 years. Her first cousin Bathsheba Bigler Smith became general president of the Relief Society.

Hannah Bigler Miller, seated second from left, with her daughters.

LIVERPOOL TO SALT LAKE, 1856

The handcart bride

Mary Ann Meadows was 21, the eleventh child of a Worcestershire farm family, when she sailed from Liverpool on the Enoch Train on Good Friday 1856 with several hundred Latter-day Saint converts. One of her brothers, a soldier, had told her that if he knew she would go to Utah and join the Mormons he would blow off her head. She went. From Boston the emigrants took the railroad to Iowa City, built handcarts, and walked 1,300 miles. Hers was the Ellsworth company, the first handcart company ever to cross, and it came down Emigration Canyon on the forenoon of Friday, 26 September 1856, to be met by William Pitt's brass band, most of the city, and Brigham Young, who escorted them to the public square for a melon feast.

She found work in Brigham Young's kitchen. There a farmer named Truman Leonard, just back from four years as a missionary in India, asked Young's permission to marry two English emigrant girls; his first wife had approved. He proposed to Margaret Bourne and Mary Ann on 5 January 1857 and married them both in the Endowment House the next day, Mary Ann's 22nd birthday. Margaret insisted on being married first. Mary Ann, as her posterity put it, 'received a compensating blessing': seven children, all of whom lived to grow up, raised on the left side of a rock double house with a stairway up the middle. Her daughter Annie married Henry Miller.

GREAT SALT LAKE, 1870S

Sheep on Fremont Island

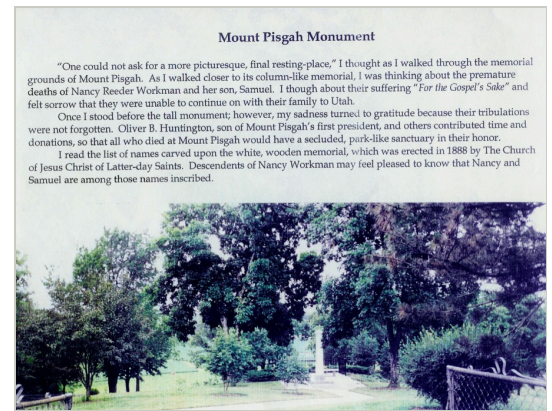

Daniel Miller and his brother Henry, having built most of Farmington, decided that Fremont Island in the Great Salt Lake, treeless and uninhabited, would make an excellent sheep range. Their sons, including Bobby's ancestor Henry William Miller, designed and built a two-masted, double-decked sailboat fifty feet long, the Lady of the Lake, launched sideways down greased planks at the mouth of Farmington Creek, capable of carrying 300 sheep a trip. They ran up to 2,000 sheep on the island, which had brackish springs, sagebrush 'as big around as a man's waist and taller than a man on horseback,' and 'a snake in every bush.' With no herder, the sheep 'became as wild as deer.'

The family communicated with the island by signal fires on the Farmington foothills; three fires meant distress. They sailed at night by the stars, were once becalmed for eight days with a load of sheep, and once nearly capsized when a foresail snapped 'with a smack as loud as a cannon shot.' On the summit they found a rock monument left by the explorer John C. Frémont and, beside it, the brass cap of his spyglass. A federal judge named Wenner eventually bought the island out from under them, and the Millers took their sheep off with the Lady of the Lake and a cattle barge. She was later blown ashore west of Farmington and wrecked on Promontory Point.

A poor man but an honest one

Jacob Lindsay Workman wrote his family's story in an old day book in 1855, and it is the oldest first-person account in this tree. His grandfather Jacob was 'the great hunter of the savage mountains of Maryland and Pennsylvania as was Daniel Boone of Kentucky.' His father John, a Dunkard who fell out with his church, made whiskey and brandy on 3,000 acres in Tennessee, and the sight of 'people of low standing' spending their last cent on it 'put a disgust in it' that made young Jacob a teetotaler at eighteen. While other young men drank and fought and paid the county fines, he cut timber, and 'by the time I was 21 I had one as good a house as there was in the neighborhood.'

The family joined the Latter-day Saints in 1839 and 1840 and followed them to Nauvoo, to Mount Pisgah (where Jacob's wife Nancy and son Samuel died in 1846), to the Salt Lake Valley in 1848, to a mission among the Indians at Las Vegas in 1856, and to the cotton country of southern Utah in 1862, 'where we all suffered very much for food and clothing.' In 1875 he lost an eye and asked his son to lance it with a pocketknife. He died in July 1878 near Virgin City, and his son closed the book: 'My father was always a poor man but an honest one. He raised a large family and when he died no man could say that J. L. Workman owed him a cent.'

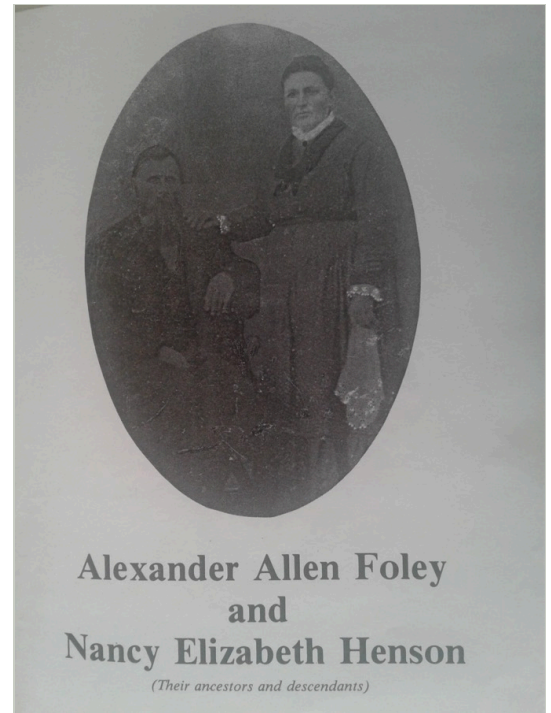

Mount Pisgah, Iowa, where Jacob Workman's first wife and son died in 1846.

ATCHISON, KANSAS TERRITORY, 1 MARCH 1857

The elopement to Atchison

Allen Foley was 21 and Nancy Henson 16 or 17 when, 'in the company of William Berry, George Washington Yocum and his brother-in-law James Berry,' they slipped away from Platte County, Missouri, crossed the river into Kansas Territory at the height of the Bleeding Kansas troubles, and were married at Atchison on 1 March 1857. They set up in Kickapoo Township outside Leavenworth, then wandered back through three Missouri counties as Allen, a farmer, 'had difficulty finding an area that satisfied him.' In November 1862, with Missouri in the grip of guerrilla war, he enlisted as a private in Company D of the 82nd Missouri Mounted Infantry.

They settled at last in Jasper County, near Carthage, and had eleven children; the seventh, born in 1872, was named Pinkney Pearl. Allen died at 47 in June 1882 of a bowel obstruction. A month later Nancy delivered twin girls who died the day they were born. Left with five children under sixteen, she earned the family's living as a carpet weaver in her home. In 1897 she followed her married children west and settled in Red Bluff with her three bachelor sons, Pinkney among them. Three years later Pinkney married the daughter of a Portuguese immigrant, and the Foleys became a Red Bluff family.

Alexander Allen Foley and Nancy Elizabeth Henson.

PICO AND MADEIRA TO RED BLUFF, 1870S

Two islands in the Atlantic

Antone DeRose was born Ant3nio da Rosa on Pico in 1855, in the shadow of Portugal's highest mountain, on an island whose men went to sea on American whaling ships and came home, when they came home at all, talking of California. He left about 1870, at fifteen. Mary Augusta Rodrigues was born in 1858 on Madeira, 600 miles to the southeast, and emigrated at nineteen. They met in Tehama County, where Portuguese islanders were taking up dairy and sheep land along the Sacramento River, and married on 21 March 1879. Their first child, Mary Clara, was born in Red Bluff the following winter.

Mary Clara married an Irish-Missouri boy, Pinkney Foley, in 1900, and their nine children grew up with names from both worlds: Antone, Theodore, Lenora, Victor, Phillip, Cecelia, Mary Lucille, Joaquin and Angelo. Nora, the third, was Bobby's great-grandmother, which makes Bobby roughly one-sixteenth Azorean and Madeiran, and puts the Catholic cemetery of St. Mary's in Red Bluff, where the DeRoses and Foleys lie, on the family map alongside the Farmington City Cemetery in Utah.

Mary Augusta Rodrigues, 'Mary A. DeRose', on a calling card.

KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND WASHINGTON, 1888-1917

Sod houses, a well, and a helicopter

Sam Goodwin, orphaned young, married Flora Clark near Norton, Kansas, in January 1888 and immediately loaded a covered wagon for Custer County, Nebraska, where Flora's mother had land. Their eldest son Harry, writing in 1955 at 67, remembered it: 'We built and lived in a sod house and Ed was born there. I remember when Mother was carrying Ed before he was born she was coming from stove to table, and a snake hung down from the rafters and rattled. Mother fainted and fell on the floor and Dad came running in with a scoop shovel and swiped that snake off the rafters and killed it on the clay floor.' Back in Kansas, Sam 'bought a school 80 and built a sod house again, cutting into a bank first,' with a roof of willows, sod and magnesia a foot thick that still leaked. There little Mary jumped into an open well after her brother; Sam fished her out with a rope, throwing sunlight down the shaft with a mirror, and ten feet of water came in right after.

The family went on to the mill town of Tenino, Washington, in 1900, back to Kansas, back to Washington, and finally to Red Bluff about 1917, where Sam farmed hay at Dairyville. Flora outlived him by eighteen years. In the great Christmas flood of 1955, when the Feather River broke through and drowned Yuba City, 87-year-old Flora and her son Al climbed into the attic and spent the night on the rafters above the rising water. In the morning Al punched a hole in the roof and waved down a helicopter. 'Can you beat that?' Harry wrote to his niece. 'Mother was in the army hospital for 2 days, but is now home in Marysville and OK.'

Flora and Sam

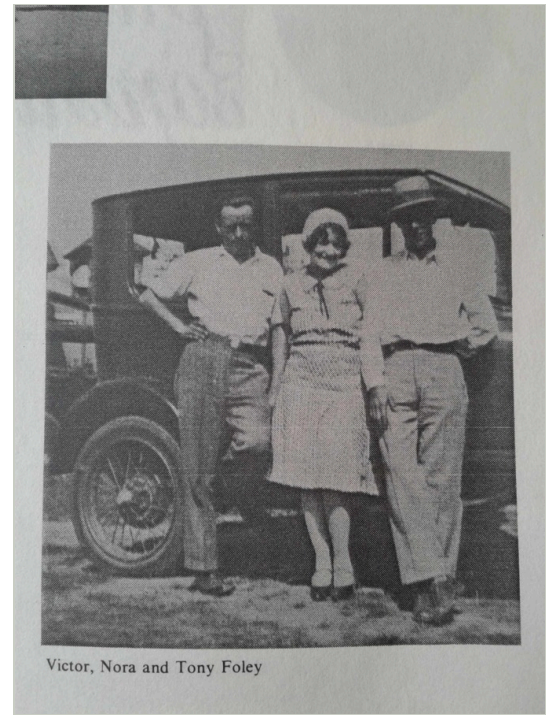

Flora and Sam Goodwin.

RED BLUFF, 21 NOVEMBER 1921

Nora, married at seventeen

The county record is exact: on 21 November 1921, seventeen-year-old Lenora Augusta Foley married 24-year-old Charles Herbert Goodwin, a Kansas-born Army veteran of the World War who had come to Red Bluff with his parents. The ceremony was performed by Father Philip F. Brady of the Catholic church, witnessed by her brother Antone Foley and Lucile Spangle, 'with verified consent of Lenora's father,' since she was under age. Her father Pinkney lived to see two grandchildren before he died in August 1923.

The young Goodwins had Dolores in 1923, Robert in January 1925, Harold in Oregon in 1926 and Patricia in Humboldt County in 1928, moving north with the lumber work. The marriage did not survive the Depression; in 1933 Nora married Joseph Rocha at Gold Beach on the Oregon coast, and Joe raised Robert and Patricia. The family lived in San Francisco and then Burlingame, where Nora spent the last fifty years of her long life. She died in 1998 at 93, four years after her first great-great-grandchild's generation had begun to arrive.

Victor, Nora and Tony Foley beside a Model A, about 1930.

OHIO, 24 JULY 1851

Disowned for love

The Goodwins were Quakers for at least four generations. Joseph Goodwin was born in 1795 in Chowan County, North Carolina, where Goodwins had belonged to the Society of Friends since the 1690s, and Mary Hixson in the Quaker settlement of Wrightsboro, Georgia. They married 'in meeting' at Elk Creek in Preble County, Ohio, in 1822, and raised nine children there. Their son Miles, at 21, fell in love with Martha Sloat, an eighteen-year-old Pennsylvania German girl who was not a Friend. They took out a marriage license on 23 June 1851. On 24 July the Elk Monthly Meeting minuted that Miles Goodwin had been disowned 'for disunity,' the Quaker term for marrying outside the faith.

Miles died in Iowa in 1865 at 35, leaving Martha with seven children under thirteen. The Friends took her in anyway: the Pleasant Plain meeting recorded her certificate that September. She remarried an Irishman and moved to Kansas, and her son Sam, raised by strangers, became the wandering, snake-killing, sod-house-building patriarch of the Red Bluff Goodwins. His granite marker at Oak Hill sits a few rows from the veteran's stone of his son Charles.

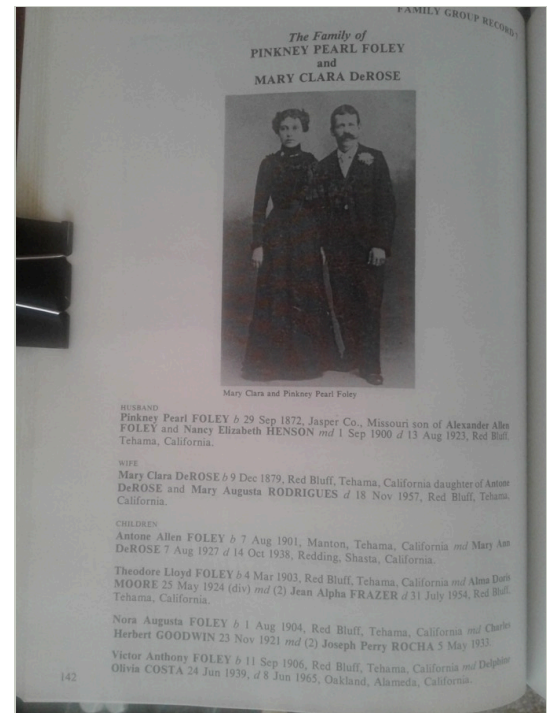

Probably Joseph Goodwin and Mary Hixson, Quakers of Preble County, Ohio, and Jefferson County, Iowa.

The frontier preacher and the boatwright's daughter

The Foley name is Irish, from Ó Foghladha, 'descendant of the marauder,' but this Foley line had been in Virginia since the 1600s. Its most vivid figure is the Reverend Moses Foley, born in 1738, a Baptist preacher who gathered and constituted churches across the frontier of southwest Virginia, on the New River and the Holston, then in Tennessee, and finally in Kentucky, where he moved with a company of Baptists about 1808 and became second pastor of the Cumberland River church at Barbourville. The Foley book cautiously calls William Foley's descent from Moses's family 'possible'; FamilySearch's shared tree records William as the son of Moses's son James, born on the New River in 1774.

William married Elizabeth Radford Boatright in Garrard County, Kentucky, in 1828, the ceremony performed by Moses Foley Jr. Elizabeth's family were the Boatwrights of Cumberland and Powhatan counties, Virginia, boatbuilders by name, planters by trade; her grandfather James Boatright supplied the Revolutionary cause and left a will in 1814 dividing land, an island in the James River, and enslaved people among his children. Her father Benjamin died at 46 in 1816 leaving her mother pregnant with a tenth child; the widow moved the family to Kentucky, where Elizabeth married William and died at 34 in 1840. Their fifth child was Alexander Allen Foley, who eloped to Kansas.

The Foley family group record, with the 1900 wedding portrait of Mary Clara and Pinkney Pearl Foley.

LIFE PROFILES

The people, generation by generation

Grandparents first, then back through the great-great-grandparents on each side. Every profile ends with the records it rests on. Living people are named only as the family gave them.

Father's side • the Oviatt line

GRANDFATHER (FATHER'S FATHER)

Raymond Miller Oviatt 1917–2007

BORN 22 June 1917, Parker, Fremont County, Idaho

DIED 24 October 2007, San Mateo, California, aged 90

Raymond grew up in the Snake River farm country of eastern Idaho, the fourth of six children of Walter and Amy Oviatt. He was blessed in the Latter-day Saint church as a six-week-old, lived in Parker and then Pocatello, and moved with his parents to Salt Lake City in 1938 after graduating from the University of Idaho's Southern Branch in Pocatello, the school that is now Idaho State University. Before the war he worked at Fred and Kelly's, a drive-in barbecue restaurant in Salt Lake.

He entered the Army in March 1941 and the Air Corps in April 1942, trained as a fighter pilot, and went overseas on 17 March 1944. Flying a Curtiss P-40L Warhawk (serial 42-10917) with the 315th Fighter Squadron, 324th Fighter Group, Twelfth Air Force, he failed to return from a mission over Italy on 8 May 1944. The Army opened Missing Air Crew Report 4728, and on 25 May the Salt Lake papers reported him missing in action. He had bailed out over enemy territory. Eighteen days later he was back with his unit, and on 15 June 1944 he walked in on his astonished parents at 1095 South Ninth East in Salt Lake City, on a 21-day leave. Asked about it, he 'merely said, I was forced to bail out over enemy territory. I remained there for 18 days.' By June 1945 he was a First Lieutenant and a test pilot at Fort Sumner Army Air Field in New Mexico.

After the war he married Marian Louise Martin of Worcester, Massachusetts, in Clark County, Nevada, on 28 October 1949; the 1950 census found them in Los Angeles, Raymond working as a mechanic. He was living in San Mateo by 1971, married Valerie Rae Wristen in Reno in 1975, lived in Belmont in the 1990s, and died in San Mateo in 2007 at 90.

Second Lieutenant Raymond M. Oviatt, from the Salt Lake clipping his family kept.

RECORDS

FamilySearch KW6Q-Q48 Missing Air Crew Report 4728 (Aviation Archaeology index)

Salt Lake Telegram, 25 May 1944, p. 13 Salt Lake Telegram, 15 June 1944, p. 14

Salt Lake Tribune, 14 June 1945, p. 9 1950 census, Los Angeles

GREAT - GRANDFATHER

Walter Lewis Oviatt 1885–1966

BORN 6 March 1885, Farmington, Davis County, Utah Territory

DIED 7 February 1966, Los Angeles; buried Wasatch Lawn Memorial Park, Millcreek, Utah

Walter was the baby in the blacksmith shop. His mother Josephine died in August 1886, when he was seventeen months old, and his father Dee, a Farmington blacksmith, wrote to his sister that October: 'We call our baby Walter Lewis... The baby is in the shop with me most of the time. He can tell how the cow and sheep, pigs, dogs and horse and rooster goes. He can mock them nicely... He has slept with me on the floor ever since his mother was taken sick. He is the best little fellow in the country.' Ten weeks after writing that letter Dee died too. Walter was not yet two, and he and his older siblings were raised by relatives.

By 1900 he was living at St. Anthony in Fremont County, Idaho, where his mother's brother James Thomas Workman had helped found the town of Parker in 1885. On New Year's Day 1907 Walter married Amy Irene Miller at Parker, another Farmington child whose family had moved north. They farmed at Parker through the 1910s, moved to Pocatello by 1930, and to Salt Lake City in 1938, where they lived on Ninth East and waited out the war news about their son Raymond. Walter registered for the 1942 draft at 57, was living in Tooele, Utah, in 1950, and died in Los Angeles in February 1966. Amy died six months later. They were buried together at Wasatch Lawn in Salt Lake County.

L. Walter Oviatt (right) with his brother John F. and sister Josephine O. Haight, the siblings who grew up together after their parents died.

RECORDS

FamilySearch KWJ6-8V2 Dee Albert Oviatt letter, 31 Oct 1886 (FamilySearch Memories)

Find a Grave, Dee Albert Oviatt Sr. (children list)

GREAT - GRANDMOTHER

Amy Irene Miller 1885–1966

BORN 4 July 1885, Farmington, Utah Territory

DIED 6 August 1966, Santa Monica, California; buried Wasatch Lawn Memorial Park

Born on the Fourth of July in Farmington and blessed in the church that October, Amy was the daughter of Henry William Miller and Annie Marie Leonard, both from the founding families of the town. Her parents moved to the Snake River Valley of Idaho around 1900, and it was there, at Parker, that she married Walter Oviatt on 1 January 1907. She raised six children: Lucille (1908), Thelma (1910), Lewis Henry (1912), Raymond (1917), and twins in 1920, one of whom, Ann, lived to 2011. She followed Walter from Parker to Pocatello to Salt Lake City and finally to California, and died in Santa Monica in the summer of 1966.

RECORDS FamilySearch KWJV-Q9M

GREAT - GREAT - GRANDFATHER

Dee Albert Oviatt 1843-1887

BORN 4 September 1843, Nauvoo, Hancock County, Illinois

DIED 2 January 1887, Farmington, Utah; buried Farmington City Cemetery

Dee was born in Nauvoo in the last full year of Joseph Smith's life, the seventh child of Ira and Ruth Oviatt. He was two when his family left Illinois with the Saints, spent his boyhood at Council Point on the Iowa side of the Missouri, and crossed the plains at seven in 1851. He grew up to be a blacksmith like his father; the Farmington museum records 'Dee Oviatt had a shop on the corner of State Street and 2nd East.'

On Christmas Eve 1865 he married Josephine Workman, and they had ten children. When Aurelia Spencer Rogers organized the church's first Primary for children in Farmington in 1878, D. Albert, Josephine and Nannie Oviatt were on the founding roll. His surviving letter, written after Josephine's death, is heartbroken and plain: 'I have lots of work in the shop that takes my mind off my trouble. I think if I could not work, I would go crazy.' He died on 2 January 1887 at 43, and their youngest children were raised by relatives.

Farmington, Utah
October 31, 1886
Received your kind and welcome letter and was glad to hear that you were all well.
We are all pretty well at present, and I hope this will find you all the same. Dave and Paul were here in the morning, and I received your letter in the evening. They had been up to Logan Temple. They had three children with them. They were all well and getting along better than they ever had, so they say.
David wanted me to move out there - to Ashley.
You wanted to know how I get along. Mother and the two girls do the house work for us.
We call our baby Walter Lewis. The older one is John Fred. We lost a girl between them, Caroline Estela. She was as pretty as a picture and smart as could be. Well, dear Sister, how I do wish you could come and make us a visit, and then I could tell you more than I could write in a year.
D. Albert is not married, yet.
I got a letter from Lucy the other day. They were all well. Thomas was carrying the mail out there. They raised some potatoes and corn but no wheat.
I raised two hundred and eighty seven (287) bushels of wheat myself this year.
You wanted me to come down there. You don't know how I would like to come, but I can't leave things here, now. I have lots of work in the shop that takes my mind off my trouble. I think if I could not work, I would go crazy. We were just a getting so we could live comfortable. We had got two of our rooms papered and fixed up so that we could enjoy ourselves when we had company and now I can't bare to think the Lord's will be done.
The baby is in the shop with me most of the time. He can tell how the cow and sheep, pigs, dogs and horse and rooster goes. He can mock them nicely. He can call all of us by our names. He is getting as fat as a little pig. He has slept with me on the floor every since his mother was taken sick. He is the best little fellow in the country.
How I do wish you could come and make us a visit if nothing more than a week or two. I would like it so well. There ain't much news here, now.
Mother sends her love to you and your mother and all the rest.
Tell Joseph to write to us if he can get time. Give my respect to him and his family anyhow.
We had quite a storm here, this fall, but it is fine weather here now. I think I will go out for a dirt haul when it comes another storm. We will be gone about a week. We go up to Weber.
You said peaches were only worth 1 cent. They are worth 5 here. The most of ours are rotting on the ground for the want of gathering.
The children are all "a bed and sleep", so I will have to quit for this time ... hoping to hear from you soon.
My love to your mother and all.
D. Oviatt

Dee's letter of 31 October 1886, two months after Josephine died and ten weeks before his own death.

RECORDS

FamilySearch KWJD-NK5 Find a Grave 39656543 Aurelia Spencer Rogers, Life Sketches (1898), p. 268

GREAT - GREAT - GRANDMOTHER

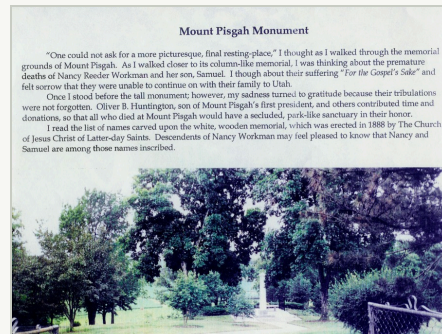

Josephine Workman 1845–1886

BORN 27 July 1845, Nauvoo, Illinois

DIED 23 August 1886, Farmington, Utah; buried Farmington City Cemetery

Josephine's life began in Nauvoo and was shaped by the exodus. Her father Jacob Workman wrote that 'in the spring of 1846 we left Nauvoo for the plains and came to Mt Pisgah. There we suffered much sickness and affliction. There my son Samuel died October the 11th 1846, then Nancy my wife died also November the 23rd 1846.' Josephine was sixteen months old. Her father remarried the following February, and in April 1848 the family started for the valleys of the mountains, arriving in September; Josephine was three.

She grew up in Salt Lake City, married Dee Oviatt in Farmington on 24 December 1865, and bore ten children, including Walter, the last. She died in August 1886 at 41 after an illness, and her husband followed her within five months. Her brother James Thomas Workman, who had walked the plains as a boy of thirteen, later founded Parker, Idaho, where Josephine's orphaned son Walter would make his home.

Mount Pisgah, Iowa, the way station where Josephine's mother Nancy died in November 1846.

RECORDS FamilySearch KWN2-D9P Jacob Lindsay Workman, handwritten history (1855)

GREAT - GREAT - GRANDFATHER

Henry William Miller 1860–1943

BORN 5 October 1860, Farmington, Utah Territory

DIED 24 May 1943, Salt Lake City

Named for his father's inseparable brother, Henry grew up on the Miller farm that covered much of what is now Farmington and the Lagoon amusement park. As a young man he took part in the family's most improbable enterprise: running sheep on Fremont Island in the Great Salt Lake, ferried out on a home-built two-masted sailboat called the Lady of the Lake. His cousin Seymour Miller's account names 'Daniel's sons Jacob, Edward, Joe, Dan, and Henry' among the crew.

He married Annie Marie Leonard in Salt Lake City on 11 September 1884, was ordained a High Priest and set apart for a mission in 1886, and around 1900 moved his family to the new farming towns of the upper Snake River in Idaho. They had eight children. Annie died at St. Anthony in 1920; Henry remarried Annette Abbott in 1921 and died in Salt Lake City in 1943.

RECORDS FamilySearch KWZH-FHK Seymour L. Miller, 'Experiences on the Great Salt Lake and its Islands'

GREAT - GREAT - GRANDMOTHER

Annie Marie Leonard 1863–1920

BORN 5 February 1863, Farmington, Utah

DIED 28 March 1920, St. Anthony, Idaho; buried Parker Cemetery

Annie was the third of the seven children of Truman Leonard and his English handcart-pioneer wife Mary Ann Meadows. She grew up in the rock double house on the Leonard farm north of Farmington, where her mother lived on the left side and her mother's sister-wife Margaret on the right. She married Henry Miller in 1884, moved with him to Idaho, and raised eight children at St. Anthony and Parker. She died there in 1920 at 57 and is buried in the Parker cemetery.

Annie Marie Leonard Miller, from a descendant's copy of a family portrait.

RECORDS FamilySearch KWZH-FH2

THIRD GREAT-GRANDFATHER

Ira A. Oviatt 1804–1868

BORN 8 December 1804, Berlin, Rensselaer County, New York

DIED 1 July 1868, Farmington, Utah; buried Farmington City Cemetery

Ira Oviatt is the pioneer of the Oviatt line. Born in upstate New York into a family that had been in Connecticut since the 1630s, he married Ruth Fellows Bennett in 1829 and followed work west through Pennsylvania and western New York before joining the Latter-day Saints around 1839. The family lived at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1841 and then at Nauvoo, where Ira owned a lot on Block 148, was ordained an Elder in April 1844, received his temple endowment, and buried two small sons.

He left Nauvoo with the Saints in 1846, served as clerk of the Council Point branch in Iowa in 1847 and sat on the Pottawattamie High Council from 1848 to 1851, and crossed the plains with the Easton Kelsey company, which formed on 29 June 1851 and reached Salt Lake on 22 September after an aborted June start turned back by Indian trouble. He settled at Farmington, bought the town's first schoolhouse and moved it to 300 North to convert it into a blacksmith shop, took a plural wife, Nancy Maria Whitlock, in 1856, and died in 1868. He appears in Esshom's Pioneers and Prominent Men of Utah.

Ira and Ruth's shared headstone in the Farmington City Cemetery.

RECORDS

FamilySearch KWJ1-PKY Early Latter-day Saints database

Pioneers and Prominent Men of Utah (1913), p. 271

Church History Biographical Database: Easton Kelsey Company

Farmington Blacksmiths, Farmington City Museum

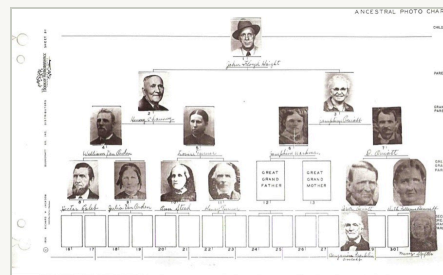

THIRD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Ruth Fellows Bennett 1808–1893

BORN 28 September 1808, Bainbridge, Chenango County, New York

DIED 15 August 1893, Farmington, Utah

Ruth was 21 when she married Ira in 1829. Over the next twenty years she gave birth in Smethport, Pennsylvania; in Belmont, New York; in Kirtland, Ohio; in Nauvoo; and twice at Council Point, Iowa, nine children in all. She buried Zera and Willis at Nauvoo and fourteen-year-old Sarah Jane at Council Point in 1848. She walked into the Salt Lake Valley in September 1851 at 42, lived another 42 years in Farmington, and died there at 84. Her descendants are numerous enough that a 1919 Deseret News obituary for her son Henry Herman counted fifty grandchildren, 114 great-grandchildren and fourteen great-great-grandchildren for that one son alone.

A 1950s ancestral photo chart kept by a cousin: Ira Oviatt and Ruth Fellows Bennett appear at right as great-grandparents, with their son D. Oviatt and his wife Josephine Workman above them, and Benjamin Franklin Oviatt below.

RECORDS FamilySearch KWJ1-PKT Church History Biographical Database Find a Grave 108029

THIRD GREAT-GRANDFATHER

Jacob Lindsay Workman 1812–1878

BORN 7 July 1812, Overton County, Tennessee

DIED 28 July 1878, near Virgin City, Kane County, Utah

Jacob left his own account, written in 1855 in an old day book and copied out by his son. His father John ran 3,000 acres, a grist mill and a whiskey distillery in Overton County, Tennessee, and Jacob, disgusted by what the liquor did to the men who bought it, swore off drink at eighteen and put the money into timber for a house: 'by the time I was 21 I had one as good a house as there was in the neighborhood.' The family joined the Latter-day Saints in 1839 and 1840; Jacob moved to Nauvoo in 1842, was made a captain of ten in Lorenzo Snow's company when the Saints left in 1846, and lost his son Samuel and his wife Nancy at Mount Pisgah that autumn.

He remarried, reached the Salt Lake Valley in September 1848, and spent the rest of his life being sent where the church needed him: to Las Vegas in 1856 'to preach to the Indians and teach them to raise corn,' leaving his family 'without grub,' then to the lead mines, then in 1862 to Utah's Dixie to raise cotton, where 'we all suffered very much for food and clothing for the first few years.' He lost an eye in 1875 (his son lanced it with a pocketknife at his request) and died in 1878 after two months of pain, exhorting his family 'to never forsake Mormonism.' His son's epitaph: 'My father was always a poor man but an honest one... when he died no man could say that J. L. Workman owed him a cent.'

RECORDS

FamilySearch KVP1-MPM Jacob Lindsay Workman handwritten history, copied by Abram S. Workman 1880
Pioneer Overland Travel Find a Grave 52155

THIRD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Nancy Reader 1810–1846

BORN 12 February 1810, Rutherford County, North Carolina

DIED 23 November 1846, Mount Pisgah, Union County, Iowa

Nancy married Jacob Workman in Overton County, Tennessee, on 15 August 1834 and bore him six children: James Thomas, Samuel, William Smoot, Hiram Parley, Josephine and one more. She went with him to Nauvoo in 1842 and out onto the Iowa prairie in 1846. At the way station of Mount Pisgah, where hundreds of the exiled Saints sickened that first autumn, she buried her son Samuel on 11 October and died herself six weeks later. She is buried in the Mount Pisgah cemetery, and her name is on the pioneer monument there. Her daughter Josephine, Bobby's ancestor, was sixteen months old.

RECORDS FamilySearch KWJD-NKR

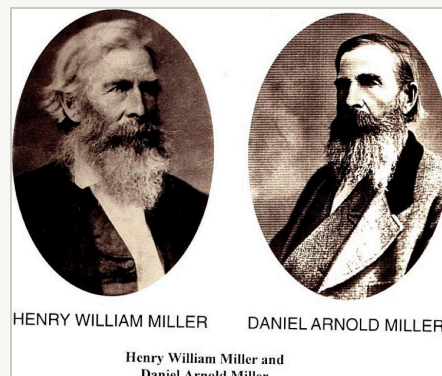

Daniel Arnold Miller 1809–1881

BORN 11 August 1809, Lexington, Greene County, New York

DIED 4 December 1881, Providence, Cache County, Utah

Daniel and his older brother Henry left New York as teenagers for the trading post of Chicago, saved their wages, and by about 1829 had bought land at Quincy, Illinois, where they built a steam grist and sawmill on Bear Creek and married sisters, Clarissa and Elmira Pond. When the Latter-day Saints arrived in Quincy in 1839, driven out of Missouri, the Millers took them in, listened to a Mormon cooper named Abel Lamb, and were baptized that September. Joseph Smith ordained both brothers High Priests on 6 April 1840; Daniel was made bishop of the Mount Hope Stake in Adams County that October, served in the Nauvoo Legion, and helped build the temple and the Nauvoo House.

Clarissa died in September 1844, two months after the murder of Joseph Smith. On 29 December 1844 Daniel married Hannah Bigler. In 1846 the brothers helped cut the road west across Iowa, and in 1848 Daniel captained twenty wagons in the William Perkins company, arriving in the valley on 4 September 1848 with four ox teams, a one-horse team driven by Hannah, seven cows, seventeen sheep, four pigs and five chickens. His was one of the five founding families of Farmington: Daniel drove the team while his son Jacob held the plow that turned the town's first furrow. He helped locate the Parowan settlement in 1850, went back to Iowa in 1852 to bring the last company of Saints out of Kanesville (282 people, 70 wagons, arriving 9 September 1853), and with Henry built the Davis County Courthouse in 1854, the first courthouse in the Territory. The brothers' farm covered much of Farmington, including the ground that became Lagoon, and they were the first to run sheep on Fremont Island. He died at his daughter's home in Cache Valley in 1881. His daughter's history ends: 'He was a noble man, true and faithful to the church, to his brethren and to his God.'

Daniel Arnold Miller (right) and his brother Henry William Miller, business partners for fifty years.

RECORDS

FamilySearch KWJ6-74X Sarah Miller Hess, 'History of Daniel Arnold Miller', in My Farmington (1977)

DaLene Day Bryant, 'Henry William Miller: Captain, Congressman, Mission President' Find a Grave 107997

THIRD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Hannah Bigler 1820–1905

BORN 24 June 1820, Shinnston, Harrison County, Virginia (now West Virginia)

DIED 13 March 1905, Farmington, Utah

Hannah lost her mother at seven and was raised for a time by her Harvey grandparents. Her family joined the Latter-day Saints in West Virginia in the 1830s and gathered to Nauvoo, where she married the widowed bishop Daniel Miller in December 1844. Her older brother Henry William Bigler marched to California with the Mormon Battalion, was hired on at Sutter's sawmill, and on 24 January 1848 wrote in his diary that 'some kind of mettle was found in the tail race that looks like goald.' Because James Marshall kept no diary, Henry Bigler's entry is the record that fixes the date of the California gold discovery; the diary is now at the Huntington Library.

Hannah herself drove a one-horse team across the plains in 1848 with a toddler and a baby, then raised ten children in Farmington. She was widowed in 1881 and lived until 1905, when she was buried in the Farmington City Cemetery. Her first cousin Bathsheba Bigler Smith became the fourth general president of the Relief Society.

Hannah Bigler Miller, seated second from left holding a book, with her daughters, about 1900.

RECORDS

FamilySearch KWJ6-746 Find a Grave 108036

Henry William Bigler diary, 1848 (Online Archive of California)

THIRD GREAT-GRANDFATHER

Truman Leonard Jr. 1820–1897

BORN 17 September 1820, Middlesex, Ontario County, New York

DIED 28 November 1897, Farmington, Utah

Truman was baptized in 1841, ordained a seventy in 1843, and married Ortentia White in the Nauvoo Temple on 1 January 1846, weeks before the Saints abandoned the city. He reached Utah in 1850 and had barely started a farm at Farmington when, in 1852, he was called on a mission to India. He preached in Calcutta and returned by way of England in 1856 with the first handcart emigration, walking beside the carts of the McArthur company. He came home 'nearly destitute after four years away' to find the bishop had divided his homestead among newcomers, leaving him twenty acres.

In January 1857 he married two young English emigrants on the same day in the Endowment House, Margaret Bourne and Mary Ann Meadows. He drummed in the Deseret Brass Band, marched with it to Echo Canyon during the Utah War, lost a mule and 116 sheep in a wind-driven fire in 1860, served as county selectman, road supervisor and water master for the creek that once bore his name, ran the Mormon Reformation in Farmington with such zeal that one family left for California, and served two more missions in the 1870s. His journals are at Brigham Young University, and his life is the subject of a Utah Historical Quarterly article, 'Truman Leonard: Pioneer Mormon Farmer' (1976).

RECORDS

FamilySearch KWJ6-WR5 Church History Biographical Database

Glen M. Leonard, 'Truman Leonard: Pioneer Mormon Farmer', Utah Historical Quarterly 44 (1976)

Truman Leonard journals, BYU L. Tom Perry Special Collections

THIRD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Mary Ann Meadows 1835–1899

BORN 6 January 1835, Strensham, Worcestershire, England

DIED 21 October 1899, Farmington, Utah

'Polly' Meadows was the eleventh child of a Worcestershire farming family. Her brothers were hostile to her new religion; one, a soldier, reportedly told her 'if I knew you would go to Utah and join the Mormons, I would blow off your head.' She sailed anyway, leaving Liverpool on the Enoch Train on Good Friday 1856, landed in Boston six weeks later, took the train to Iowa City, and walked to Utah pulling a handcart with the Ellsworth company, the very first handcart company, which came down Emigration Canyon on the forenoon of 26 September 1856 to be met by William Pitt's brass band and Brigham Young himself.

She went to work in Brigham Young's kitchen. Truman Leonard, home from India, asked Young's permission to marry two English emigrant girls; his first wife approved, and the double wedding was held in the Endowment House on 6 January 1857, Mary Ann's 22nd birthday. She raised seven children in a rock double house on the Leonard farm, every one of whom lived to adulthood, and died in 1899 in Farmington.

RECORDS FamilySearch KWJX-5BT Daughters of Utah Pioneers history by Marlene Day (1995)

One generation further: the fourth great-grandparents (father's side)

Benjamin Franklin Oviatt I & Frances Sweet 1783–1864 · 1782–1836

Ira's parents. Benjamin was born at Berlin, Rensselaer County, New York, into a family that had lived at Milford and New Milford, Connecticut, since Thomas Oviatt arrived from Tring, Hertfordshire, in the 1630s; he died at Hornell, New York. Frances descended from the Sweets of Rhode Island and the Maxsons of Westerly.

John Thomas Bennett & Mary Slater 1767–1842 · 1774–1851

Ruth's parents. John was born at Mansfield, Connecticut, and Mary at Scituate, Rhode Island; they married at Brattleboro, Vermont, in 1798 and died in Potter County in the Pennsylvania woods. The Bennetts of Stonington descend from Thomas Miner, a founder of that town and one of colonial New England's great diarists.

John Workman & Lydia AnnBilyeu 1789–1855 · 1793–1845

Jacob's parents. John, born in the Allegheny mountains of Maryland, was a Dunkard who quarreled with his church, prospered on 3,000 acres in Overton County, Tennessee, joined the Latter-day Saints in 1840 and gave up everything to follow them to Nauvoo. Lydia bore twenty children and died at Nauvoo in 1845, weeks after mobs burned the Saints' farms. John ended his days copying patriarchal blessings in Salt Lake City.

James Gardner Miller Sr. & RuthArnold 1771–1845 · 1768–1816

Daniel's parents. James was of Connecticut Yankee stock (his father Henry served in the Connecticut militia in the Revolution); Ruth came from the Arnolds and Brainerds of East Haddam. Widowed in 1816, James followed his sons to Illinois and died at Nauvoo, having been ordained a High Priest by his son.

Truman Leonard Sr. & RoxannaAllis 1784–1846 · 1786–1846

Truman's parents, married at Canaan, New York, in 1811, who both died at Chatham, Ohio, in 1846. Truman Sr.'s father was Captain Ezra Leonard of the Revolution, and Roxanna's was Lemuel Allis, another Revolutionary soldier; the Leonards descend from Solomon Leonard, a Welshman at Plymouth Colony by 1637.

Thomas Reader & LucyMullins 1774–1819 · 1780–1840

Nancy Reader's parents, from Mecklenburg County, Virginia, who settled in Rutherford County, North Carolina, and Overton County, Tennessee.

Jacob Bigler Jr. & ElizabethHarvey 1793–1859 · 1795–1827

Hannah's parents, of Shinnston in the hills of western Virginia. Jacob's grandfather Marcus Bigler came from Alsace, and the Biglers before him from Muri near Bern, Switzerland. Jacob became a Latter-day Saint, served as a bishop in Iowa, and died in Farmington in 1859.

Thomas Meadows & AnnOverbury 1796–1867 · 1794–1878

Mary Ann's parents, farming people of Strensham and Bredon on the Worcestershire Avon, who never left England.

Mother's side · the Goodwin and Foley lines

GRANDFATHER (MOTHER'S FATHER)

Robert Charles Goodwin 1925–2014

BORN 4 January 1925, Tehama County, California

DIED 2014, California, aged 89

Robert was born in Red Bluff country in the first week of 1925, the second of Charles and Nora Goodwin's four children, and the only known photograph of him as a baby is the Foley family portrait in which his mother holds him under a tree beside her brothers in overalls. His father's work took the family to Oregon and then to Eureka, where the 1930 census found them; his parents' marriage ended, and in 1933 his mother married Joseph Rocha, who raised Robert and his sister Patricia from the age of eight. The family moved to San Francisco by 1935 and to Burlingame on the Peninsula.

Robert registered for the draft on his eighteenth birthday, 4 January 1943, in Burlingame, and served in the Second World War; his discharge was processed at Camp Beale on 15 January 1946. In April 1950 the census taker found him at 25, single, working as a brake repairman and living in Burlingame with his stepfather Joseph Rocha, a business partner, his mother, and his sister Patricia, a bookkeeper. The California Birth Index, which records the mother's maiden name for every birth in the state, gives him two daughters with a mother born a Miller: Susan Lenora Goodwin, born 18 February 1950 in Santa Cruz County and named for Robert's mother, and Elizabeth Anne Goodwin, born 29 May 1951 in San Mateo County, at Redwood City; the family has confirmed Elizabeth's name and birthday against the index. The census taker who wrote Robert down as single in April 1950 was two months late: Susan had already been born. The girls' mother was not part of their lives afterward; the family believes she died in Santa Maria, California, and her first name has not yet been found. Susan later lived at Boulder Creek in the Santa Cruz Mountains and died a few years ago. Robert died in California in 2014 at 89, the grandfather whose first name Bobby carries.

About 1925: Charles Goodwin holding Dolores; Victor, Phillip, Cecelia, Lucille, Joaquin and Angelo Foley; Nora holding baby Robert; and Mary DeRose Foley.

RECORDS

FamilySearch GHLM-CTK 1950 census, household of Joseph P. Rocha, Burlingame
California Military Discharge Records (FamilySearch)

GREAT - GRANDFATHER

Charles Herbert Goodwin 1897–1985

BORN 20 September 1897, Clayton, Kansas

DIED 12 October 1985, Martinez, California; buried Oak Hill Cemetery, Red Bluff

Charles was the fourth of Sam and Flora Goodwin's ten children, born in a sod house near Clayton in northwest Kansas. He was two when the family moved to the mill town of Tenino, Washington, and grew up between there and the Kansas farms. The family came to Red Bluff around 1917; Charles served in the Army in the First World War and was mustered out at Red Bluff in October 1919. The 1920 census lists him as a 23-year-old laborer on his father's hay farm at Dairyville.

On 21 November 1921 he married seventeen-year-old Nora Foley in Red Bluff, in a ceremony performed by Father Philip F. Brady, a Catholic priest, with the written consent of the bride's father. Four children followed in six years: Dolores in Tehama County, Robert in Tehama County, Harold in Oregon and Patricia in Humboldt County, a trail that shows the young family following work north. The marriage ended around 1930. Charles was living in Los Angeles when his father died in 1942, married Jane Beggs in 1969, and died in Martinez in 1985 at 88. He was brought home to Red Bluff and buried under a veteran's stone at Oak Hill, near his parents.

Charles's military headstone at Oak Hill Cemetery, Red Bluff: 'US Army, World War I'.

RECORDS

FamilySearch KWZ9-ZYF Find a Grave 96036980

Tehama County marriage record, Book K p. 389 (via RootsWeb Grissom pages)

GREAT - GRANDMOTHER

Lenora 'Nora' Augusta Foley 1904–1998

BORN 4 August 1904, Red Bluff, Tehama County, California

DIED 13 January 1998, Burlingame, California, aged 93

Nora was the third of nine children born to Pinkney Foley and Mary Clara DeRose in Red Bluff, in a household that was half Irish-Missouri and half Portuguese. She married Charles Goodwin at seventeen, three months after her father's death, with her brother Antone as witness, and had four children by the time she was 23. Family photographs from the Foley book show her in a cloche hat between her brothers Victor and Tony beside a Model A, and holding baby Robert in the family portrait of about 1925.

After her first marriage ended she married Joseph Perry Rocha, a Humboldt County man of Azorean parents, at Gold Beach, Oregon, on 5 May 1933, and Joseph raised Robert and Patricia as his own. They lived in San Francisco in the late 1930s and settled in Burlingame by 1949, where Joseph was a partner in a business. Nora was widowed in 1973 and lived another quarter century, dying in Burlingame in January 1998 at 93. She is the grandmother Bobby's mother knew as Nora Rocha.

Nora as a girl, from the privately printed Foley family book (1986).

RECORDS

FamilySearch LKJR-YFZ Foley family book, Ann McClellan (1986), family group records
1950 census, Burlingame

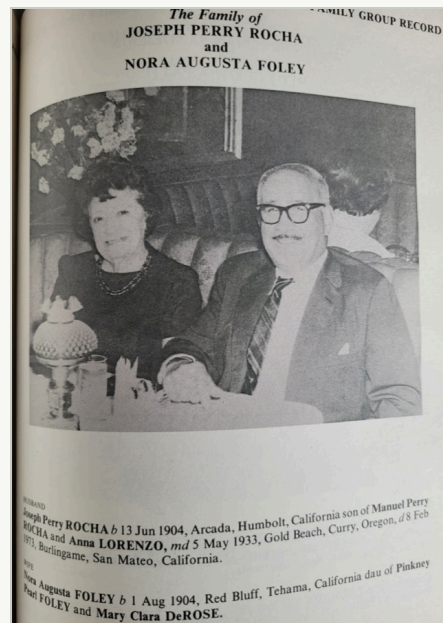

STEP-GREAT-GRANDFATHER (RAISED ROBERT FROM 1933)

Joseph Perry Rocha 1904-1973

BORN 12 June 1904, Arcata, Humboldt County, California

DIED 8 February 1973, Burlingame, California

Joseph was the son of Manuel Prieria Rocha, who came from the Azores in 1898, and Anna Borges Laurenço, born about 1882 at Angra do Heroísmo on the island of Terceira. He grew up among the Portuguese dairy families of Arcata, lost his mother at fourteen, and married Nora Goodwin in 1933. He is listed in the 1950 census as head of the Burlingame household, a business proprietor and partner, with Robert and Patricia recorded as his children. He is not a blood ancestor, but he was the grandfather figure in the house where Bobby's grandfather grew up, and FamilySearch itself lists Robert as his son.

Joseph and Nora Rocha in later years, from the Foley book.

RECORDS FamilySearch L2YP-CB4

GREAT - GREAT - GRANDFATHER

Samuel Wilbur Goodwin 1862–1942

BORN 15 October 1862, Jefferson County, Iowa

DIED 27 April 1942, Red Bluff, California; buried Oak Hill Cemetery

Sam's father Miles, a Quaker's son, died when Sam was two. By 1870 the seven-year-old was living with a neighbor family in Macon County, Illinois, and at seventeen he was a hired laborer in another household, so he grew up essentially on his own. He married Flora Clark near Norton, Kansas, on 24 January 1888, and for the next thirty years could not stay put: a covered wagon to Custer County, Nebraska, where they built a sod house; back to Kansas, where he dug another sod house into a bank at Clayton, roofed with willows and sod a foot thick; to Tenino, Washington, in 1900, where he ran the engine at the sawmill for sixteen years; back to Norton to farm; back to Washington; and at last, around 1917, to Red Bluff.

His son Harry remembered him as a man 'always getting tired of a place' who was 'always killing rattlesnakes,' and who once fished small Mary out of a well with a rope and a mirror to throw sunlight down the shaft. In Tehama County he farmed hay at Dairyville and then lived at 416 Lincoln Street in Red Bluff, an invalid for his last six years. He belonged to the Church of God. The Red Bluff Daily News reported his death at 79 in April 1942, survived by his widow and nine children; he was buried at Oak Hill.

'Flora and Sam', a portrait kept by their descendants.

RECORDS

FamilySearch KLX3-7X2

Flora Goodwin, 'In Memory of My Husband' and Red Bluff Daily News, 28 April 1942 (FamilySearch Memories)

William Harrison Goodwin, letters of 1955–56 (FamilySearch Memories)

GREAT - GREAT - GRANDMOTHER

Flora Nancy Clark 1868–1960

BORN 5 November 1868, Bethel, Windsor County, Vermont

DIED 4 February 1960, Red Bluff, California; buried Oak Hill Cemetery

Flora was born in the Green Mountains and taken to the Kansas plains as a girl of eleven. She married Sam Goodwin at nineteen and bore ten children in sod houses and mill towns across four states, all of whom lived to adulthood. Her son Harry's letters preserve her: fainting when a rattlesnake hung down from the rafters and rattled while she was carrying Ed, raising chickens and a garden with the children, running out with a hoe when a rat bit off the end of Harry's finger.

Widowed in 1942 after 54 years of marriage, she wrote a memorial for Sam that ends 'We miss him very much but would not wish him here in this troubled world.' In the Christmas flood of 1955, when the Feather River levee broke and drowned Yuba City, 87-year-old Flora and her son Al climbed into the attic and spent the night on the rafters above the water until Al punched a hole in the roof and hailed a helicopter, which lifted them off. 'Can you beat that?' Harry wrote. She recovered after two days in an Army hospital and died in Red Bluff four years later at 91. Her grave records her as Flora Nancy Clark Johnston.

RECORDS

FamilySearch LVFC-ZN8 William Harrison Goodwin letter of 4 January 1956 (FamilySearch Memories)

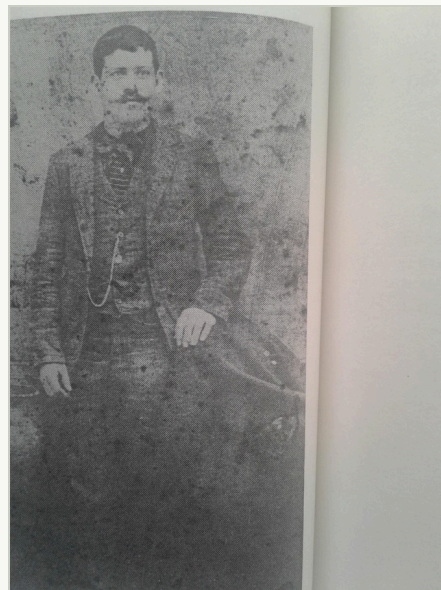

Pinkney Pearl Foley 1872-1923

BORN 29 September 1872, Jasper County, Missouri

DIED 13 August 1923, Red Bluff, California; buried St. Mary's Cemetery

Pinkney was the seventh of eleven children of a restless Kentucky-born farmer and Civil War militiaman, Alexander Allen Foley, and his wife Nancy, who had eloped to Kansas to marry. His father died when he was nine, and his mother kept the family by weaving carpets at home. In 1897 he came to Red Bluff with his widowed mother and two brothers to join married siblings already in California and Oregon.

On 1 September 1900 he married Mary Clara DeRose, the Red Bluff-born daughter of Portuguese immigrants, and they had nine children over the next seventeen years: Antone, Theodore, Lenora, Victor, Phillip, Cecelia, Mary Lucille, Joaquin and Angelo. He registered for the First World War draft at 45. He died in August 1923 at 50, three months before his daughter Nora's wedding, and was buried in the Catholic cemetery, St. Mary's.

Pinkney Pearl Foley, from the Foley book.

GREAT - GREAT - GRANDMOTHER

Mary Clara DeRose 1880–1957

BORN 15 January 1880 (family records say 9 December 1879), Red Bluff, California

DIED 18 November 1957, Red Bluff; buried St. Mary's Cemetery

Mary Clara was born in Red Bluff to Antone DeRose of the island of Pico in the Azores and Mary Augusta Rodrigues of Madeira, who had married in Tehama County the year before. She grew up speaking Portuguese in a town with a sizable Azorean community, married Pinkney Foley at twenty, and raised nine children, several of whom carried Portuguese names: Antone, Joaquin, Angelo. Widowed at 43 with children from six to 22 at home, she stayed in Red Bluff the rest of her life, outlived two sons, and died there in 1957 at 77. The wedding portrait of Mary Clara and Pinkney, and the page of nine oval portraits of their children, come from the Foley book compiled by a descendant, Ann McClellan, in 1986.

Mary Clara DeRose Foley, from the Foley book.

RECORDS FamilySearch KG7Q-TVV

THIRD GREAT - GRANDFATHER

Miles Goodwin 1829–1865

BORN 30 October 1829, Preble County, Ohio

DIED 12 March 1865, Pleasant Plain, Jefferson County, Iowa

Miles was raised in the Quaker meeting at Elk Creek in Preble County, Ohio, the son of Joseph Goodwin and Mary Hixson, who had married 'in meeting' in 1822. On 23 June 1851 he took out a license to marry eighteen-year-old Martha Sloat, who was not a Friend; a month later the Elk Monthly Meeting recorded him disowned 'for disunity,' the Quaker penalty for marrying out. The couple farmed in Ohio and then in Jefferson County, Iowa, and had seven children. Miles died there in March 1865 at 35, in the last weeks of the Civil War, leaving Martha with children aged twelve down to one, Sam among them.

RECORDS FamilySearch KLX3-7NM Time Line for Martha Sloat (FamilySearch Memories)

THIRD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Martha Sloat (Schlott) c. 1832–1894

BORN about 1832, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania

DIED 10 January 1894, Dewitt, Washington County, Kansas

Martha's family were Pennsylvania Germans: her father John Philip Schlott was christened in the Lutheran church at Windsor Township, York County, in 1802, and her grandfather Michael Schlott came from Germany. The name was anglicized to Sloat. Martha's mother died when she was small, and by 1850 the seventeen-year-old was living with a farm family in Preble County, Ohio, where she met Miles Goodwin. Widowed at about 32 with seven children, she was received into the Pleasant Plain Friends meeting in Iowa in September 1865, remarried an Irish-born farmer, James Mathews, in Logan County, Illinois, in 1868, and moved with him to Norton County, Kansas, by 1880, which is how the Goodwins came to Norton. She died in Kansas in 1894.

RECORDS FamilySearch KLX3-7NN

THIRD GREAT-GRANDFATHER

Henry Clark 1832–1905

BORN 1 September 1832, Highgate, Franklin County, Vermont

DIED 21 January 1905, Corpus Christi, Texas

Henry married Nancy Dow at Randolph, Vermont, on 26 September 1857 and served in the Union Army; a Texas newspaper later called him 'the old federal soldier.' The couple lived in northern New York, then back in Bethel, Vermont, where Flora was born, and then went west with their children to Kansas. The marriage did not last: Nancy remarried in 1892, and Henry drifted to Beaver County in the Oklahoma panhandle and finally to Corpus Christi, where he died in 1905, 'a cripple' who 'had recently lost his wife and advertised and got another one,' as his obituary put it. He is buried in Bayview Cemetery there.

RECORDS FamilySearch LVFC-3V2

THIRD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Nancy Wilbur Dow 1843–1917

BORN 14 October 1843, Bethel, Windsor County, Vermont

DIED 2 January 1917, Norton, Kansas; buried Norton Cemetery

Nancy came from old New England stock; her Dow ancestors were at Hampton, New Hampshire, in the 1640s, and her father Alphonso was a blacksmith who ended his days in Colorado. She married Henry Clark at thirteen or fourteen, bore eleven children, and by 1885 was homesteading in Custer County, Nebraska, which is why her daughter Flora and Sam Goodwin drove their covered wagon there to build a sod house near 'Grandmother.' She married John Jefferson Rollings in 1892, moved to Norton County, Kansas, and died there in 1917.

RECORDS FamilySearch LVFC-W6F

THIRD GREAT-GRANDFATHER

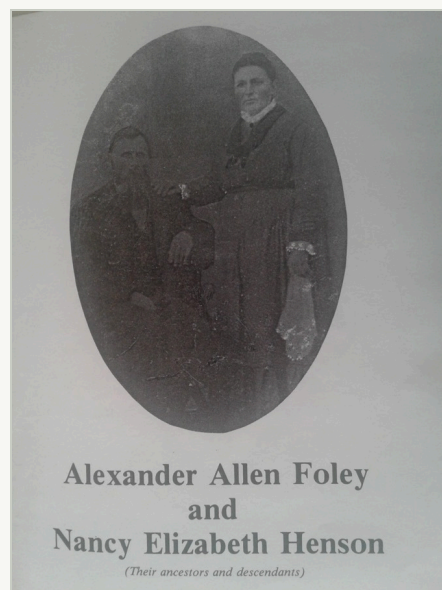

Alexander Allen Foley 1835–1882

BORN 13 November 1835, Madison County, Kentucky

DIED 29 June 1882, Carthage, Jasper County, Missouri; buried Stafford Cemetery

'Allen,' as he was known, was fifteen when his father sold the farm on Paint Lick Creek and moved the family to Platte County, Missouri, in 1851. On 1 March 1857, in the company of two friends and his brother-in-law, he and Nancy Elizabeth Henson eloped across the river to Atchison, Kansas Territory, and were married. They lived in Kickapoo Township near Leavenworth during the Bleeding Kansas years, then drifted back to Missouri, to Barton, Ray and finally Jasper County. In November 1862 he enlisted as a private in Company D of the 82nd Regiment, Missouri Mounted Infantry, a Union militia unit raised in a state torn by guerrilla war.

The family history describes him as 'a farmer, but had difficulty finding an area that satisfied him.' He and Nancy had eleven children. In June 1882, four months after his eldest daughter's wedding, he died of a bowel obstruction at 47. A month later Nancy gave birth to twin girls who died the same day.

Alexander Allen Foley and Nancy Elizabeth Henson, the restored portrait that opens the Foley book.

RECORDS FamilySearch L85X-YBN Alexander Allen Foley life sketch, Foley book (1986)

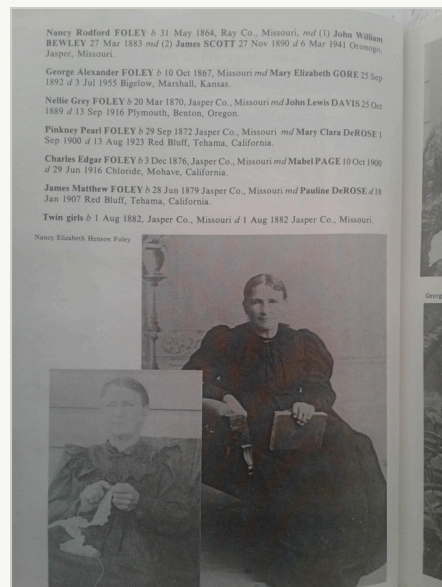

THIRD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Nancy Elizabeth Henson 1840–1907

BORN 1840, Platte County area, Missouri

DIED 8 December 1907, Red Bluff, California; buried Foley plot, Oak Hill Cemetery

Nancy was the eldest of the eleven children of William B. Henson and Nancy Vaughn, born in far western Missouri the year her parents married there. She was sixteen when she ran off to Kansas with Allen Foley. Widowed at 42 with five children under sixteen, she 'earned a living for her family as a carpet weaver in her home.' In 1897, with several of her married children already in California and Oregon, she moved to Red Bluff with her three unmarried sons; her brother Edgar came too and lived with them for a time. She spent her last years with her daughter Nellie Grey Davis and died in Red Bluff in December 1907, the first of the Foleys buried in the family plot at Oak Hill.

Nancy Elizabeth Henson Foley, and a page of her children's records, from the Foley book.

RECORDS FamilySearch L85X-B93 History of the Henson Family, Foley book (1986)

THIRD GREAT-GRANDFATHER

Antone DeRose (António da Rosa) 1855–1919

BORN 30 May 1855, Ilha do Pico, Azores, Portugal

DIED 25 July 1919, Red Bluff, California

Antone was born on Pico, the volcanic island in the central Azores whose whalers and farmers left in great numbers for California in the nineteenth century. He emigrated about 1870 as a teenager and made his way to Tehama County, where a Portuguese community was forming around Red Bluff. On 21 March 1879 he married Mary Augusta Rodrigues, herself newly arrived from Madeira, and the couple appear in every census from 1880 to 1910 in Red Bluff, where they raised five children: Mary Clara, Frank, Pauline Florence, William and a fifth daughter. His parents are recorded as Ricardo da Rosa and Maria Clara Gonçalves, the latter christened at Flamengos on the neighboring island of Faial in 1832.

RECORDS FamilySearch K83L-JHY Portrait Pedigree of Theodore Lloyd Foley (FamilySearch Memories)

THIRD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Mary Augusta Rodrigues 1858–1926

BORN 18 April 1858, Madeira (Funchal), Portugal

DIED 22 December 1926, Red Bluff, California

Mary Augusta came from Madeira, the Atlantic island 600 miles southeast of the Azores, the daughter of João Augusto Rodrigues. She emigrated about 1877 at nineteen and within two years had married Antone DeRose in Tehama County. She outlived her husband and two of her sons, Frank in 1908 and William in 1914, and died in Red Bluff three days before Christmas 1926. Her portrait survives on an ornate calling card printed with roses and lilies of the valley, the only image of her that has come down.

A Victorian calling card with the portrait of 'Mary A. DeRose'.

RECORDS FamilySearch KC61-L19

One generation further: the fourth great-grandparents (mother's side) _____

Joseph Goodwin & MaryHixson 1795–1871 · 1802–1893

Miles's parents, both Quakers. Joseph was born in Chowan County, North Carolina, into a Goodwin family recorded there since the 1690s; Mary in the Quaker settlement of Wrightsboro, Georgia. They married before the Elk Monthly Meeting in Preble County, Ohio, in 1822, farmed at Gratis for thirty years, and moved to Iowa, where Joseph is buried in the Friends Cemetery at Pleasant Plain.

Alphonso Dow & OliveBarnes 1818–1884 · 1813–1875

Nancy Dow's parents. Alphonso, born in Vermont, was a blacksmith at Evans, Colorado, after the Civil War; Olive was a Royalton, Vermont, girl. The Dows go back to Henry Dow of Runham, Norfolk, who settled Hampton, New Hampshire, in the 1640s, and include Captain Lemuel Dow of the Revolution.

William Foley & Elizabeth RadfordBoatright 1803–1872 · 1806–1840

Allen's parents, married in Garrard County, Kentucky, on 14 August 1828 by Moses Foley Jr. William farmed on Paint Lick Creek in Madison County (the 1834 tax list shows 40 acres, one enslaved person and four horses; by 1847, six enslaved people), sold out in 1851 and moved to Platte County, Missouri. Elizabeth, born in Powhatan County, Virginia, died in 1840 after bearing seven children and lies in the Boatright burial ground at Paint Lick.

Ricardo da Rosa & Maria ClaraGonçalves b. c.1830 · c.1832

Antone's parents, of Pico in the Azores. Maria Clara was christened at Flamengos, Horta, on the island of Faial, on 27 May 1832.

John Philip Schlott & CatharineGreen 1802–1887 · 1806–?

Martha's parents, Pennsylvania Germans of York and Lancaster counties. The Schlotthauers came from the Palatinate wine villages of Weisenheim and Bobenheim am Berg near Bad Dürkheim.

Elizabeth D. Clark 1816–1906

Henry Clark's mother, of Vermont. His father's name is not recorded.

William B. Henson & Nancy EllenVaughn 1815–1895 · 1817–1896

Nancy Henson's parents. William was born in Madison County, Kentucky; Nancy at Liberty, Missouri, in 1817, when Clay County was raw frontier. They married in Platte County in 1840 and raised eleven children in Buchanan County. Nancy's Vaughan line runs back through Goochland and New Kent counties to Virginia in the 1600s.

João Augusto Rodrigues& wife b. c.1830 · c.1834

Mary Augusta's parents, of Madeira.

Deeper roots

Beyond the fourth great-grandparents the trail runs into colonial America and Europe: Connecticut and Rhode Island in the 1630s, Virginia in the 1650s, Dutch Brooklyn, Alsace and Switzerland, Yorkshire and Worcestershire, Pico and Madeira.

Read this part with the right amount of salt. Everything above generation 5 comes from the shared, user-edited FamilySearch tree, not from records checked one by one for this project. The New England and Utah lines there are generally well documented; the colonial Virginia and Kentucky links are thinner, and three of the grandest names below are almost certainly wishful. The tables list what the tree records; the notables table says how much to trust each claim.

Notable names on the tree

NAME	WHO THEY WERE, AND HOW THE LINE RUNS	CONFIDENCE
● Rev. John Maxson Sr. 1638–1720	Pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church at Westerly, Rhode Island; tradition holds he was the first English child born on Aquidneck Island. Through Frances Sweet, Ira Oviatt's mother.	SOLID
● Robert Burdick 1630–1692	A founder of Westerly, Rhode Island, imprisoned by Massachusetts in 1661 for settling disputed land. Through the Maxsons.	SOLID
● Thomas Miner 1608–1690	A founder of Stonington, Connecticut, whose diary (1653–1684) is one of the best records of daily life in early New England. Through Ruth Fellows Bennett.	SOLID
● Joseph Loomis 1590–1658	Woolen draper of Braintree, Essex, who settled Windsor, Connecticut, in 1639. Through Mary Ruth Barber, Ira Oviatt's grandmother.	SOLID
● Philip Sherman 1610–1687	First Secretary of the colony of Rhode Island under the 1638 Portsmouth compact. Through the Sweets.	SOLID
● Pierre Billiou 1632–1708	Walloon Huguenot who led the first permanent settlement on Staten Island in	SOLID

NAME	WHO THEY WERE, AND HOW THE LINE RUNS	CONFIDENCE
	1661; his stone house still stands. Through the Bilyeus (Workman line).
● Dirck Janse Woertman 1631–1694	Amsterdam-born ferryman at Brooklyn in the 1650s, ancestor of the Workman family. Through John Workman.	SOLID
● Marcus Bigler 1705–1787	Born at Ingolsheim in Alsace to a Swiss family from Muri bei Bern; emigrated to Bucks County, Pennsylvania. Through Hannah Bigler.	SOLID
● Hon. Daniel Brainerd 1641–1715	A founder of Haddam, Connecticut, deacon and justice. Through Ruth Arnold, Daniel Miller's mother.	SOLID
● Capt. Ezra Leonard, Lemuel Allis, Henry Miller, Capt. Lemuel Dow 1700s	Four Revolutionary War soldiers appear among the fifth and sixth great-grandfathers on the paternal side (Leonard, Allis, Miller lines) and one, Lemuel Dow, on the maternal side.	SOLID
● Rev. Moses Foley Sr. 1738–1823	Frontier Baptist preacher who founded churches on the New River and the Holston in Virginia, in Tennessee and in Kentucky, and was second pastor of Cumberland River Baptist Church at Barbourville. The Foley book calls William Foley's descent from Moses's family 'possible'; FamilySearch records it as fact.	PROBABLE
● James Boatright c. 1745–1815	Cumberland County, Virginia, planter whose supplies and services in the Revolution qualify his descendants for the Daughters and Sons of the American Revolution. His 1814 will survives.	SOLID
● Rev. John Youngs 1598–1672	Puritan minister who founded Southold, Long Island, in 1640. Through Moses Foley's wife (if the Foley link above holds).	PROBABLE
● Col. Gideon Macon 1638–1702	New Kent County, Virginia, planter and burgess, great-grandfather of Martha Washington. FamilySearch runs the Foley	DOUBTFUL

NAME	WHO THEY WERE, AND HOW THE LINE RUNS	CONFIDENCE
	line to him through Jane Byrd; the middle links are thinly documented.
● Rev. John Eliot 1604–1690	The 'Apostle to the Indians' who printed the first Bible in America. FamilySearch attaches a Virginia Elliott to him as a son; historians do not, so treat this link as almost certainly wrong.	DOUBTFUL
● Sir John Maitland, 5th Earl of Lauderdale 1655–1710	Scottish peer whom FamilySearch makes an ancestor of Moses Foley's wife Elizabeth 'Lauderdale' Green. A classic family legend with no records behind it.	DOUBTFUL

Every recorded ancestor, by line

Each panel opens the ancestors behind one of Bobby's sixteen great-great-grandparents, starting two generations above them. Relations are counted from Bobby.

1602 TO 2014

Timeline

1602	Thomas Oviatt born at Tring, Hertfordshire; his family settles Milford, Connecticut, by the 1640s (paternal)	1738	Rev. Moses Foley born in Fauquier County, Virginia (maternal, probable)
1638	Rev. John Maxson born on Aquidneck Island, Rhode Island (paternal)	1769	Benjamin Boatright born near Richmond, Virginia (maternal)
1661	Pierre Billiou leads the first settlement on Staten Island (paternal, Workman line)	1770s	Capt. Ezra Leonard, Lemuel Allis, Henry Miller and Lemuel Dow serve in the Revolution
1690s	Goodwins recorded among the Quakers of Chowan County, North Carolina (maternal)	1804	Ira Oviatt born, Berlin, New York
		1809	Daniel Arnold Miller born, Lexington, New York
		1812	Jacob Lindsay Workman born, Overton County, Tennessee

1822	Joseph Goodwin and Mary Hixson marry before the Elk Monthly Meeting, Ohio	1886–87	Josephine and Dee Oviatt die within five months, orphaning Walter
1828	William Foley marries Elizabeth Boatright in Garrard County, Kentucky	1888	Sam Goodwin marries Flora Clark in Norton, Kansas; covered wagon to Nebraska
1839–40	The Oviatts, Millers and Workmans join the Latter-day Saints	1897	Nancy Henson Foley moves to Red Bluff with her sons; Charles Goodwin born in Kansas
1843	Dee Albert Oviatt born in Nauvoo, Illinois	1900	Pinkney Foley marries Mary Clara DeRose in Red Bluff
1846	Exodus from Nauvoo; Nancy Reader dies at Mount Pisgah, Iowa	1904	Nora Foley born in Red Bluff
1848	Daniel and Hannah Miller reach the Salt Lake Valley and found Farmington; Henry Bigler's diary dates the gold discovery	1907	Walter Oviatt marries Amy Miller at Parker, Idaho
1851	Ira and Ruth Oviatt cross the plains with the Kelsey company; Miles Goodwin disowned by the Quakers for marrying Martha Sloat	1917	Raymond Oviatt born at Parker; the Goodwins arrive in Red Bluff
1856	Mary Ann Meadows walks to Utah with the first handcart company	1921	Charles Goodwin marries Nora Foley, Red Bluff
1857	Allen Foley and Nancy Henson elope to Atchison, Kansas	1925	Robert Charles Goodwin born
1862	Allen Foley enlists in the 82nd Missouri Mounted Infantry	1933	Nora marries Joseph Rocha at Gold Beach, Oregon
1865	Dee Oviatt marries Josephine Workman in Farmington; Miles Goodwin dies in Iowa	1944	Lt. Raymond Oviatt shot down over Italy, evades for 18 days, comes home
1879	Antone DeRose of Pico marries Mary Augusta Rodrigues of Madeira in Tehama County	1949	Raymond marries Marian Martin in Nevada
1885	Walter Lewis Oviatt and Amy Irene Miller born in Farmington	1950	Susan Lenora Goodwin born in Santa Cruz County, 18 February
		1951	Elizabeth Anne Goodwin born in Redwood City, 29 May
		1955	Flora Goodwin, 87, rescued by helicopter from the Yuba City flood
		1998	Nora Foley Goodwin Rocha dies in Burlingame at 93

2007

Raymond Oviatt dies in San Mateo
at 90

2014

Robert Charles Goodwin dies at 89

UNFINISHED

Open questions, and where the answers are

A family tree is never done. These are the six threads most worth pulling next.

Who was Robert Goodwin's wife, Elizabeth's mother?

Her maiden name is now known: Miller. The California Birth Index records both of Robert's daughters to a mother née Miller, Susan Lenora on 18 February 1950 in Santa Cruz County and Elizabeth Anne on 29 May 1951 in San Mateo County, and the family has confirmed Elizabeth's entry. So she was a Miss Miller, probably from Santa Cruz County, and she and Robert were together from 1949 to at least 1951. Miller is the commonest of surnames, so the next steps are specific: the California marriage index for 1949 to 1951 (a Robert C. Goodwin marrying a Miller, most likely in Santa Cruz or San Mateo County), the April 1950 census household in Santa Cruz County holding two-month-old Susan Goodwin, Susan's obituary, and the Santa Barbara County death records, since the family believes she died in Santa Maria. Elizabeth's own birth certificate would give her mother's full name in one step.

Was Marian Louise Martin Walter Lee Oviatt's mother?

Raymond married Marian (born 1926, Worcester, Massachusetts) in October 1949 and they were together in Los Angeles in April 1950 with no children yet. The family does not know. If Walter was born after 1950, Marian is the likeliest candidate, and her New England family would open a whole new quarter of the tree. Walter's birth certificate, or the California Birth Index entry that lists his mother's maiden name, settles it.

What did Robert do in the Second World War?

He registered on his eighteenth birthday in January 1943 and his discharge was processed at Camp Beale in January 1946. His California military discharge record on FamilySearch names the unit and theater; it needs a free FamilySearch login to open.

Raymond's eighteen days

Missing Air Crew Report 4728 (National Archives) and the 324th Fighter Group's May 1944 squadron histories would say where he was shot down and how he got back. The report index lists him as POW, which may mean he was captured and escaped.

The Portuguese parishes

Antone DeRose was born on Pico and his mother was christened at Flamengos on Faial in 1832; Mary Augusta Rodrigues came from Madeira. The Azorean and Madeiran parish registers are online and could carry these lines back several more generations.

Charles Goodwin's war

His headstone says US Army, World War I, and a record dated October 1919 places him at Red Bluff. His service record would say where he served.

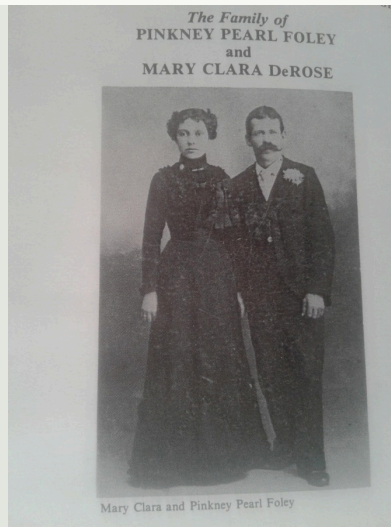

PHOTOGRAPHS AND DOCUMENTS

The family album

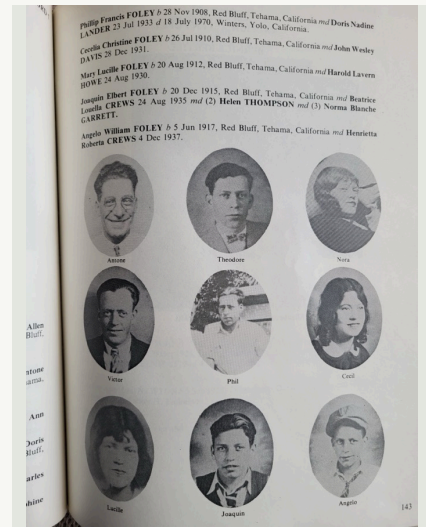

Everything here was posted to FamilySearch by relatives, most of it photographed from the 1986 Foley book and from Oviatt, Miller and Workman family papers.

The Foley clan about 1925 at Red Bluff. Charles Goodwin holds Dolores at left; Nora holds baby Robert at right beside her mother Mary DeRose Foley. Between them, her brothers Victor, Phillip, Joaquin and Angelo and sisters Cecelia and Lucille.

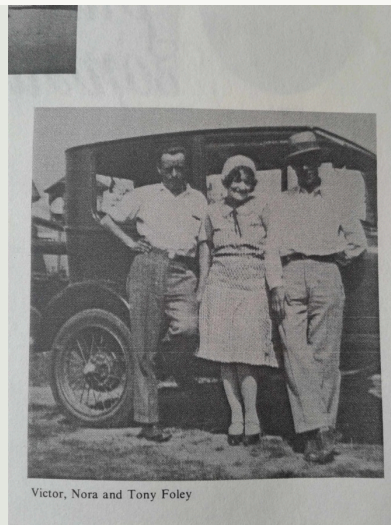

Mary Clara DeRose and Pinkney Pearl Foley, married 1 September 1900.

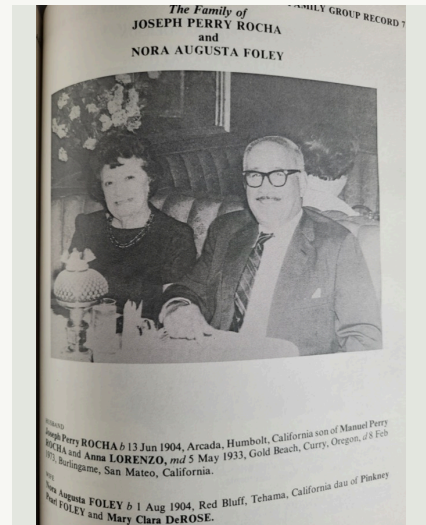

The nine Foley children, from the Foley book: Antone, Theodore, Nora, Victor, Phil, Cecil, Lucille, Joaquin and Angelo.

Nora Foley as a girl.

Victor, Nora and Tony Foley, about 1930.

Joseph and Nora Rocha.

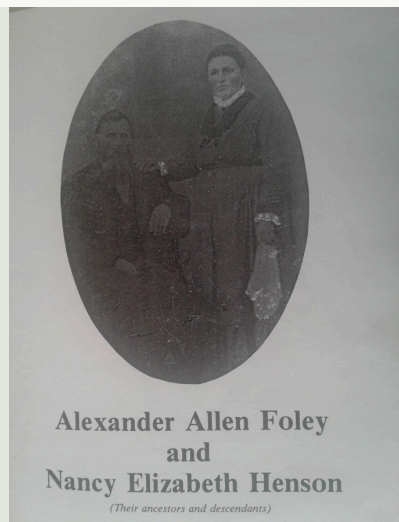

A photo-booth portrait attached to Charles Herbert Goodwin's record, thought to show Charles in later life with his second wife Jane.

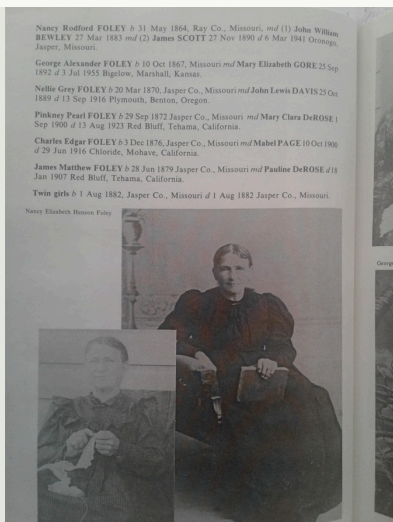

Charles H. Goodwin's headstone, Oak Hill Cemetery, Red Bluff.

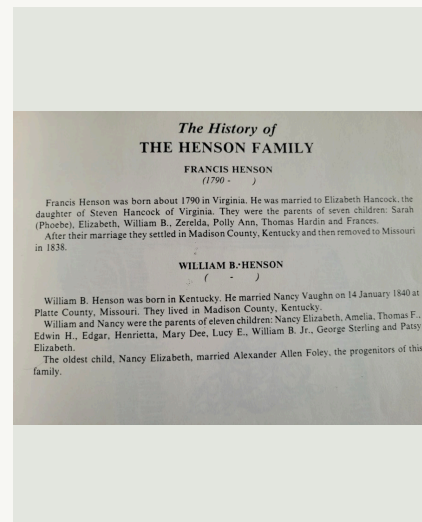

Flora and Sam Goodwin.

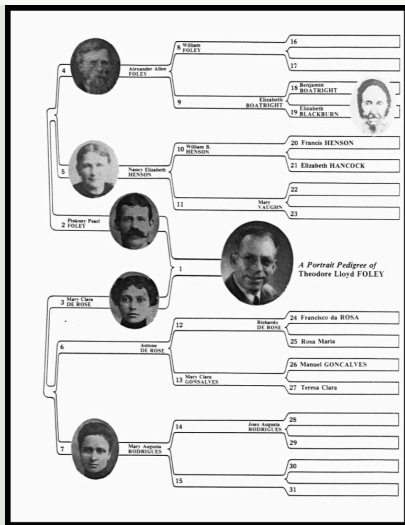

Alexander Allen Foley and Nancy Elizabeth Henson.

Nancy Henson Foley in old age, with the record of her younger children.

The Henson family history page from the Foley book.

A portrait pedigree of Nora's brother Theodore Foley, showing Pinkney and Mary Clara, Alexander and Nancy Foley, Mary Augusta Rodrigues, and Elizabeth Blackburn Boatright (upper right).

Mary Augusta Rodrigues DeRose.

Probably Joseph Goodwin and Mary Hixson, the Quaker great-great-great-great-grandparents.

Lt. Raymond M. Oviatt, missing over Italy, May 1944.

JOHN F. OVIATT L. WALTER OVIATT
JOSEPHINE O. HAIGHT

John F. Oviatt, Josephine Oviatt Haight and L. Walter Oviatt, the three siblings orphaned in 1887.

Farmington, Utah
October 31, 1886

Received your kind and welcome letter and was glad to hear that you were all well.

We are all pretty well at present, and I hope this will find you all the same. Dave and Paul were here in the morning, and I received your letter in the evening. They had been up to Logan Temple. They had three children with them. They were all well and getting along better than they ever had, so they say.

David wanted me to move out there - to Ashtabula. You wanted to know how I got along. Mother and the two girls do the house work for us.

We call our baby Walter Lewis. The older one is John Fred. We lost a girl between them, Caroline Francis. She was as pretty as a picture and smart as could be. Well, dear Sister, how I do wish you could come and make us a visit, and then I could tell you more than I could write in a year.

D. Albert is not married, yet.

I got a letter from Lucy the other day. They were all well. Thomas was carrying the mail out there. They raised some potatoes and corn but no wheat.

I raised two hundred and eighty seven (287) bushels of wheat myself this year. You wanted me to come down there. You don't know how I would like to come, but I can't leave things here, now. I have lots of work in the shop that takes my mind off my trouble. I think if I could not work, I would go crazy. We were just a getting so we could live comfortable. We had got two of our rooms papered and fixed up so that we could enjoy ourselves when we had company and now I can't have to think the Lord's will be done.

The baby is in the shop with me most of the time. He can tell how the cow and sheep, pigs, dogs and horses and rooster goes. He can mock them nicely. He can call all of us by our names. He is getting as fat as a little pig. He has slept with me on the floor every since his mother was taken sick. He is the best little fellow in the country.

How I do wish you could come and make us a visit if nothing more than a week or two. I would like it so well. There ain't much news here, now.

Mother sends her love to you and your mother and all the rest.

Tell Joseph to write to us if he can get time. Give my respect to him and his family anyhow.

We had quite a storm here, this fall, but it is a fine weather here now. I think I will go out for a deer hunt when it comes another storm. We will be gone about a week. We go up to Weber.

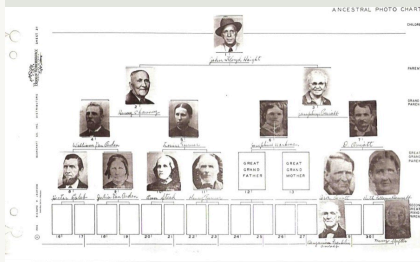

You and patches were only worth 3 cents. They are worth 5 here. The most of ours are rotting on the ground for the want of gathering.

The children are all "a bed and done", so I will have to quit for this time. . . . hoping to hear from you soon.

My love to your mother and all.

D. Oviatt

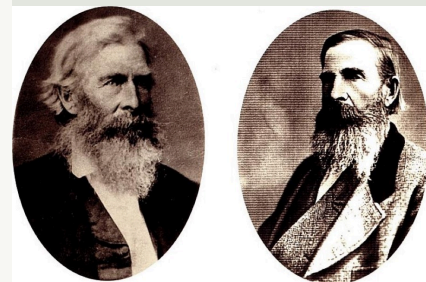

Dee Oviatt's letter of 31 October 1886.

An ancestral photo chart with tiny portraits of Ira Oviatt, Ruth Fellows Bennett, their son D. Oviatt, his wife Josephine Workman, and Ira's father Benjamin Franklin Oviatt.

Ira and Ruth Oviatt's headstone, Farmington City Cemetery.

HENRY WILLIAM MILLER DANIEL ARNOLD MILLER

Henry William Miller and
Daniel Arnold Miller

Daniel Arnold Miller and his brother Henry William Miller.

Front: Isabell Miller Bigler, Hannah Bigler Miller,
Abigail Miller Turner and Clarissa Miller Stayner
Back: Malinda Miller Jones, Emeline Miller Wilson,
Sarah Miller Hess and Bathsheba Miller Steed
Mother and Daughters

Hannah Bigler Miller with her daughters.

Annie Marie Leonard Miller.

Mount Pisgah, Iowa.

RECORDS

Sources

Where every fact on this page came from. The FamilySearch identifier on each profile opens that person's public page, with the original census, birth, marriage and death records attached.

1. FamilySearch Family Tree, public ancestor pages for every person named (identifiers are given on each profile)
2. 'Foley', compiled by Ann McClellan, privately printed 1986: family group records, portraits, life sketches of Alexander Allen Foley and William Foley, histories of the Henson and Boatwright families (as photographed and posted to FamilySearch Memories)
3. Grissom family genealogy pages (RootsWeb), Tehama County marriage, birth and census extracts for the Foley and Goodwin families
4. Find a Grave memorials: Pinkney Pearl Foley (19606296), Charles H. Goodwin (96036980), Dee Albert Oviatt Sr. (39656543), Ruth Fellows Bennett Oviatt (108029), Hannah Bigler Miller (108036), Daniel Arnold Miller (107997), Jacob Lindsay Workman (52155)
5. United States Census, 1950: households of Joseph P. Rocha (Burlingame) and Raymond M. Oviatt (Los Angeles)
6. Salt Lake Telegram, 25 May 1944 and 15 June 1944; Deseret News, 15 June 1944; Salt Lake Tribune, 14 June 1945 (Utah Digital Newspapers, University of Utah)
7. USAAF Missing Air Crew Reports database, Aviation Archaeological Investigation and Research: MACR 4728, 8 May 1944
8. Frank Esshom, Pioneers and Prominent Men of Utah (1913), pp. 271, 1081
9. Early Latter-day Saints database, Ira A. Oviatt
10. Church History Biographical Database: Ruth Fellows Bennett, Truman Leonard, Hannah Bigler, Easton Kelsey Company (1851)
11. Jacob Lindsay Workman, handwritten family history (1855), copied by Abram S. Workman (1880); Workman Family History, pp. 231–244
12. Sarah Miller Hess, 'History of Daniel Arnold Miller', in Margaret Steed Hess, My Farmington (1977), pp. 66–69
13. DaLene (Day) Bryant, 'Henry William Miller: Captain, Congressman, Mission President (1807–1885)'
14. Seymour Lewis Miller, 'Experiences on the Great Salt Lake and its Islands' (sworn statement)
15. Glen M. Leonard, 'Truman Leonard: Pioneer Mormon Farmer', Utah Historical Quarterly 44 (Summer 1976)
16. Marlene Day, 'Mary Ann Meadows Leonard', Daughters of Utah Pioneers history (1995)
17. Aurelia Spencer Rogers, Life Sketches of Orson Spencer and Others, and History of Primary Work (1898), p. 268
18. Farmington City Museum, 'Farmington Blacksmiths'
19. Flora Nancy Goodwin, 'In Memory of My Husband'; Red Bluff Daily News, 28 April 1942; timelines for Samuel Goodwin and Martha Sloat; letters of William Harrison Goodwin, 1955–56 (FamilySearch Memories)
20. Henry William Bigler diary, 1848, Huntington Library; finding aid at the Online Archive of California
21. Find a Grave and WikiTree entries for Rev. Moses Foley Sr. and Gideon Macon; Maxson Family Association

Compiled 3 September 2026 from public records. Dates follow the original documents where they disagree with later family recollection; the two known disagreements (Nora's birthday, Mary Clara's) are noted on their profiles. Photographs are reproduced from copies posted publicly by family members and remain theirs.